Why Idealism Fails
A Wall Street Clerk
Quaint Japanese Gods
Workmen's Agreements

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1920.

Lewis L. Clarke, extremely young and nevertheless head of the gigantic American Exchange Bank, with its hundred and seventy-five millions, sends to friends a monthly letter of information, meditation, prognostication, affirmation, optimism and warning. This month, wandering far from Wall Street's vocabulary, Mr. Clarke uses expressions such as "capitalistic system," once used only by raging radicals. He says:

"The capitalistic system of industry is even theoretically superior to the best of the idealistic systems."

The French and American republics and the English and Italian imitation monarchies are all four in the "capitalistic system of industry" stage, and Mr. Clarke's statement is true. No "idealistic system" ever succeeds. By the time it succeeds men no longer call it "idealistic."

Aristotle, as wise in his day as Clarke in his, said there could be no civilization without slavery. Slaves were necessary that superior minds might have leisure for superior thinking.

Aristotle was right, in his day, wrong later, when machines took the place of slaves—including human machines, twelve and fourteen years old, that work in factories. Mr. Clarke is sincere in his belief that the "capitalistic system" is the only good one, now or hereafter. But, like Aristotle, Mr. Clarke may be mistaken.

A Wall street clerk earning $35 a week, with a family of six, testifying at a government investigation, said that an apartment costing formerly $30 a month, now costs from $60 to $90. Unable to find a home that he could pay for on his salary, he had moved to a dark basement, and the janitor was trying to put him out because he had five children.

Mr. Clarke, who through all his life, like his father before him, has worked as hard as any slave of modern business responsibility, is right in his statement that the "capitalistic system" is the best system developed—thus far.

That Wall street clerk would be right if he said that the human race ought to find a better system, one that would let him take his wife and five children out of the dark basement into the sunlight. "God may forgive you," said Fichte, "for depriving children of bread that costs money. He will not forgive you for depriving them of free air and sunlight."

Kensuke Ando, Mayor of Kyoto, in an address of welcome to American Congressmen, said: "The Americans and the Japanese are equally sons of the gods, therefore love should rule both." Most polite Japanese greeting from a gentleman whose Emperor is officially related to all the celestial bodies. But the one God of the American Congressman and the various gods of the Japanese are not exactly alike.

If American statesmen will read up on some of the Japanese gods and their methods, they will learn that the highly intelligent sons of those gods will bear watching.

Japanese that are "sons" and followers of gentle, self-sacrificing Gotama, who let the mother tigress eat him to make milk for her young, we do not fear. But the Japanese have a queer assortment of gods. Some of their shinto gods, devil gods, fox and tiger gods, might have Japanese sons not exactly desirable among the peaceful people of California.

Workmen demand the right of "collective bargaining." They denounce, justly, corporations, Federal judges and others that refuse to meet authorized representatives of workmen.

Street car workers in Brooklyn, city of two millions, enter into certain agreements through their leaders. They break the agreements, stop all cars in the night without an hour's warning. Two million people walk. If workers think that is the way to promote "collective bargaining" and obtain the sympathy of the public, the workers are mistaken. Union labor is mistaken also if it imagines it can go far without public support.

Newspapers quote Mr. Roosevelt to the effect that America, with only one vote, would be powerful in the league because she would "control the votes of at least twelve West India, Central and South American republics." Roosevelt now says, "I didn't say that. I said the interests of the United States and at least a dozen of these republics are broadly identical."

Roosevelt's idea is, perhaps, that within the League of Nation's council England, with her many votes to our one, and her European allies, would line up against the United States and "a dozen of these republics," including perhaps magnificent Haiti, Guatemala and other great "world powers."

The League of Nations is a League of War, a league to make America fight and finance new wars. Mr. Roosevelt proves it when he begins looking around for "West India, Central American or South American republics" to line up on our side of the fight.

Why not keep out of the fight and out of the league, attend to our own business and let those fight that think they must?

WILL AGAIN QUESTION DEIGNAN

Manner of Shooting Is Puzzle; Stories Do Not Agree With Evidence

Providence, Sept. 4.—Authorities investigating the murder of Miss Rose McKenna and the shooting of her fiance, William J. Deignan, announced today that they could not reconcile the stories told by the wounded man with the circumstances as they found them.

Coroner Russell Richmond and Chief of Police Adams of East Providence pointed out that the bullet fired through the glass in one door of the automobile was ranging downward, while that which wounded Deignan entered below his chest and followed an upward course toward the shoulder.

Deignan had stated that he and Miss McKenna were in his automobile in the Great Barrington parkway when the shooting occurred.

Chief Adams further stated that it would have been a physical impossibility for Deignan to have done the shooting owing to the nature of his wound.

The police were watching Deignan's condition today in the hope that it would improve sufficiently so that they could resume their questioning of him. It was stated at the hospital that the wounded man had a chance for recovery.

Miss McKenna had lived in fear of an attack by some mysterious enemy.

Of all the theories which have come out of the double shooting in Great Barrington parkway this alone was being seriously considered by the police today. They based their acceptance of it mainly on the dying statement of the girl, as told by Deignan, himself at death's door in Rhode Island Hospital.

That statement was: "They've got us, Bill."

The conviction that the girl knew or had an idea who masked assassin was practically disposed of the theory that the slayer made a mistake, and "got" people he did not intend to kill.

It also revived the earlier theory

FIGHT PERMIT UP TO ALLEN

Attorney-General Must Sanction Bout Scheduled for Lawrence on Monday

Whether John E. Cuddy will be permitted to hold the Tendler-Callahan boxing show in Lawrence Monday depends upon the decision of Attorney-General Allen.

Colonel Alfred Foote of the State Public Service Commission today informed Mr. Cuddy that he doubted his own authority to sanction the bout, but that if Attorney-General Allen ruled that he had he would see that permits were issued in time not to disappoint 14,000 fans who are expected to attend.

Colonel Foote is ex-officio chairman of the newly created boxing commission. The other members have not been appointed, and he doubts his authority to act for the commission.

Colonel Foote further pointed out in withholding sanction that Lawrence had not complied with the law by formally accepting the statute making boxing legal.

Mr. Cuddy called at the State House today to report that Lawrence would have accepted the law before night, and to ask that Governor Coolidge name the other two members of the boxing commission necessary to make its decisions legal.

Cuddy is not the only boxing promoter in doubt as to his legal right to hold a show Labor Day.

An appeal from a New Bedford promoter is also expected at the State House, and clubs elsewhere in the State are embarrassed by the uncertainty surrounding boxing just now.

COL. LOGAN WEDS MISS MULLEN

Large Assemblage of Dignitaries at Marriage of Y. D. Leader to Waltham Girl

Miss Cecilia Frances Mullen, daughter of Mrs. Mary E. Mullen of Bacon street, Waltham, was married in St. Mary's Church in that city to Colonel Edward L. Logan, late commander of the 101st Regiment.

No wedding in Greater Boston in many years has been the occasion of a more imposing assemblage of dignitaries. Brigadier-General Clarence R. Edwards and a score of lesser officers represented the Yankee Division; Governor Coolidge and former Governor McCall the State; United States Senator Walsh, who might be said to have represented the nation, came as a chum of the groom.

Three former chaplains of the Twenty-sixth Division officiated at the nuptial mass, Rev. Michael Farrell, celebrant; Rev. Osias Boucher, deacon, and Rev. Michael J. O'Connor sub-deacon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Leo Logan of Campello, brother of the groom.

The bride wore a gown of white satin trimmed with old Honoton lace. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and white orchids. Her sisters, Evelyn and Marguerita Mullen, acted as bridesmaids, and Mrs. James Gormley of Dedham as matron of honor. Theodore Logan acted as best man.

James R. Gormley of Dedham, Malcolm and Francis Logan, Richard Tobin of Jamaica Plain, John C. Hyer of Brookline and Dr. John T. Bottomley of Boston were the ushers. The ceremony was followed by a reception at the home of Mrs. Mullen to members of the immediate families. Colonel and Mrs. Logan left afterward for a trip through the Berkshires by motor to New York, whence they will sail for France. They will be abroad a number of weeks in connection with Colonel Logan's duties as a member of the Massachusetts Commission, and upon their return will reside on Broadway, South Boston.

Mrs. Logan is a native of Waltham, a graduate of the public schools of that city, and an alumnae of Notre Dame Academy.

BULLETINS.

London, Sept. 4.—The life of Terence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork, hangs upon a thread which may be severed any moment. So alarmed are the Brixton jail physicians that they have forbidden his relatives conversing with him. The slightest exertion would be fatal, they explained.

Governor Calls Council to Act on Resignation of Treasurer

Governor Coolidge today received the resignation of State Treasurer Fred J. Burrell and immediately called his council into executive session to name a successor.

It was predicted today that James Jackson of Westwood, former New England manager of the American Red Cross, would be named. Mr. Jackson is the candidate of the Republican State Committee to run in the primaries on "stickers."

His candidacy, it is believed, is favored by the Governor and other leaders in the Republican party.

State House rumor had it that Burrell's resignation was forced by banker friends. It was said these men feared that if the investigation continued their alleged relations with the State Treasurer in his dual capacity would become known.

Five bankers had been summoned before the Legislative Investigating Committee when Burrell's voluntary withdrawal closed the case.

In his letter Burrell said he stated that he was resigning, not because he had done wrong, but to save his aged mother and the members of his family the "pain and anguish of mind" that has come to him through "unwarranted attacks" on him and his work.

Burrell's resignation statement fol-

FIRE AND RIOTS MARK STRIKE

Brooklyn Car Barn Damaged; Mob Attacks Police With Bricks; Stopped by Bullets

New York, Sept. 4.—Two surface cars were destroyed and four others badly damaged by fire in the Ridgewood car barns, Brooklyn, today, and 500 strike-breakers housed on the floor above were forced to flee into the street, where strike sympathizers attacked them. Police reserves fired many shots before order was restored.

The disturbance followed a meeting of 3,000 strikers at 3 a. m., when Federal Judge Mayers' "surrender terms" to the strikers were hooted down.

Officials of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company declared the fire was started by strike sympathizers. When fifteen police began to escort the strike-breakers from their quarters strike sympathizers on top of adjacent buildings began hurling bricks at the strike-breakers. Many were injured.

Auto Balks and Its Driver Is Arrested

A political parade in the North End blasted the hopes of Harry W. Eady, who claims Somerville as his home, of keeping possession of an automobile the police charge he took in front of the Brewster Hotel.

Eady met the parade and stalled the machine. As the marching column approached he yelled to bystanders to help him push the car out of its path. Several persons rolled the car to the curbing.

Policeman Donovan was suspicious and asked Eady to show his license. His arrest followed. The car is the property of Frank A. Brunzo of Somerville.

lows

"I have resigned as Treasurer and Receiver-General, not because I did any wrong, but because the pain and anguish of mind that has come to my aged mother and the members of my family by the unwarranted attacks upon me has grieved me and, rather than cause them any further pain, I am sacrificing myself.

"I go out of office conscious that time will demonstrate that my conduct of the office was without reproach.

NO WISH TO HOLD OFFICE.

"I ask my friends and well-wishers throughout the State not to vote for me at the primaries. I have no further wish to hold public office."

The treasurer's resignation occasioned widespread surprise among the political leaders, who believed that his announced declaration to fight his "banking enemies" and the entire roster of Republican chiefs would be faithfully adhered to throughout the bitter controversy.

Burrell, since his election last November, has been the storm centre of attacks and counter-attacks, involving charges that the Treasurer held his office as a weapon over the heads of the leading bankers of the State as a means of enlarging his advertising business.

These charges culminated with the Ponzi expose and it was shown that Burrell had State funds in at least one banking institution in excess of the amount allowed under the law—namely 40 per cent. of the bank's total capitalization.

Considerable of the Burrell agitation revolved around the Hanover Trust Company. Last November this institution had approximately $500 of the State's funds on deposit and when the Ponzi crash came it had mounted to $125,000. The bank had a contract with the advertising agency Burrell conducted.

REPUDIATED BY PARTY.

In the inquiry which followed the disclosure that State funds were deposited in the Hanover Trust Company, Burrell was asked to state the amount of money on deposit in other banks in the State. This he refused to do, claiming that it was none of the people's business.

Burrell was later repudiated by Republican leaders and Jackson picked to run for the office of Treasurer on "stickers." In the meantime, Governor Coolidge appointed a committee composed of members of the Legislation to investigate Burrell's conduct in office.

Mrs. MacSwiney Appeals to President and Wife

London, Sept. 4.—President Wilson and Mrs. Wilson have been asked by Muriel MacSwiney, wife of the Mayor of Cork, who is dying in Brixton prison, to intervene in his behalf. Her cable to the President reads:

"President Wilson,
"Washington, D. C.

"You, sir, enunciated the principle of self-determination for all nations. My husband, Terence MacSwiney, the Lord Mayor of Cork, lies dying in an English prison because he upholds and fights for self-determination. He is prepared to sacrifice his life for that principle.

"Tried by a foreign court which is not recognized in his native land, and forcibly cast into jail, his only possible weapon of protest is a refusal to take food. I ask you to use your influence with the English government to prevent the perpetration of this outrage on civilization.

"MURIEL MacSWINEY."

The cablegram to Mrs. Wilson is:

"I have just cabled your husband asking for his intervention for one who is dying to uphold the principles for which America entered the European war. I ask you in the name of humanity to support that request. My husband is dying because he will not acknowledge the British right to imprison Irishmen. His death may be a matter of hours.

BURRELL PLAN CALLED 'HOLDUP'

Surles Says $100,000 Was Taken From Trust Company When He Ignored Letter

Statements by Henry R. Surles, a Boston newspaperman and publicity agent of the Metropolitan Trust Company that he regarded the letter from the Burrell Advertising Agency soliciting bank advertising as "a hold-up game" and that he turned over $3,000 worth of advertising in the hope of keeping the State deposits in the bank, featured the investigation of State Treasurer Fred J. Burrell by the legislative committee.

Surles and Vice-President William H. Stickney testified that Burrell had withdrawn $100,000 of State deposits from the Metropolitan before the advertising was given to the Burrell agency and that $100,000 was deposited in the bank a short time later. The deposits were increased from time to time, they said.

GETS LETTER FROM BURRELL.

Other developments in the Burrell case were an attempt to secure an injunction restraining Louis A. Coolidge, Louis K. Liggett and George H. Ellis of the Republican organizations from spending more than $1,500 in the "sticker" campaign of James Jackson, anti-Burrell candidate, and a statement by Burrell that his record as State Treasurer will finally vindicate him from the attacks of the "slander-mill."

Surles testified that he received the form letter from the Burrell agency, signed by Burrell, and that he made no reply for several weeks. "I regarded the letter as a holdup game," he said. "It was my purpose to steer clear from a reply if possible. I didn't want to go ahead with Burrell.

$100,000 WITHDRAWN.

"About the latter part of April, $100,000 was withdrawn. It came after several weeks' refusal to reply to Burrell. The result was I gave Burrell part of the bank advertising. As I remember it, the deposits were somewhat increased before we gave the advertising.

"I made up my mind it would be good business to give him some advertising. I talked with Burrell but there was no suggestion that the deposits would be increased. No subject of that kind was ever approached."

Surle said he understood that Burrell received 15 per cent. commission, or $450, on the $3,000 worth of advertising. He said he understood the commissions were paid by the newspapers, and not by the bank.

VOTERS AROUSED SAYS BORAH

Finds Them Interested in Political Issues to "Point of Ugliness"

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 4.—Scoring those who say the people are not asking any interest in the Presidential campaign, and declaring to the countrary he had never witnessed deeper feeling on the part of the pulic in any election, William E. Borah, Senator from Idaho, is in Washington planning to stump the East and Middle West agaist the League of Nations.

"I haven't noticed any apathy—at least not among the people," he said. "People everywhere I have been are genuinely interested in the issues. I found them interested to the point of ugliness. They are quietly determined to se the state of offairs brought about by the war ended, and unless it is ended there will be mischief.

"That, to my mind, is the one big outstanding feature of this campaign.

"There is almost a total lack of the old-fashioned boisterousness and hullabaloo. That is true. Noise can always be artificially created. But the people of this country are thinking more profoundly about this election than was ever the case in any election I can remember.

"People are talking about getting us out of the place where the war left us. They want the country to get back again to normal, economically and industrially.

"The freight rates increase hit us hard in the West and people are ugly about it. After freight rates went up prices of the things the farmers raise and sell went down. The people take that as an example of the way everything affects them."

GERMANY TRYING TO BUY PHOSPHATE ROCK

Germany has been shipping potash to this country and in return is seeking about 100,000 tons of phosphate rock. But efforts for an exchange on the barter basis were unsuccessful owing to Teutonic need for cash. Germany has been getting three times as much for potash as before the war.

Ir regards to filling phosphate rock needs in this country, it is said that Germans have not been able to close contracts because of difficulty over the payment and guarantee of $21 a ton freight, an amount about twice the price to be paid for the material.

Mannix Accuses Cabinet of Spreading Anarchy in Erin

London, Sept. 4.—Archbishop Daniel J. Mannix of Australia broke his long silence today in a statement accusing the British Cabinet of spreading anarchy throughout Ireland by its refusal to release Terence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork.

"Will the Cabinet bring peace nearer if Terence MacSwiney dies in Brixton Prison?" he asked.

"Does the Cabinet know what is happening in Belfast and knowing it are the Cabinet members satisfied to return from their holidays and face the risk of all that his death may bring in its train when their minds should be full of the idea of a 'truce of God' and appeasement of the Irish nation by a speedy settlement of the Irish question?

"They seem bent on spreading anarchy in Ireland. It is truly deplorable that with his life in balance the members of the Cabinet should be scattered all over Europe. It is almost incredible that they would remain obdurate if they were in touch with one another."

More Striking Dock Men Return to Work

The strike of Boston dock workers in protest against the treatment accorded Lord Mayor Terence MacSwiney, of Cork, is showing signs of breaking up.

Eighty longshoremen presented themselves for work at the dock of the Cunard steamship Anglo-Mexican, loading in East Boston, and other British companies reported strikers returning in small groups. The appeal of the international officers of the Longshoremen's Union was the principal factor in this breaking up of the spontaneous walkout. These officers warned the men that the strike was unlawful, and might prejudice the cause of the unions when new wage schedules were discussed in October.

DOCK STRIKERS' RAISE IN PERIL

Union Chiefs to Warn Men Walkout Hampers Action on Wage Increase

A direct appeal by officials of the International Longshoremen's Association was to have been made today to the dock workers now on strike in Charlestown and East Boston, urging them to return to work and warning them that their actions will only embarrass the efforts of the union to secure a wage increase in October when their agreement ends.

Although no meetings are scheduled the union officials will make an effort to gather the men together and discuss the strike, an outlaw movement called as an expression of sympathy and protest at England's treatment of Mayor MacSwiney.

With her holds filled to overflowing, the British ship Nitonian sailed out of Boston two days late as a result of the walkout. The ship, however, benefited from the strike as she carried a cargo greatly in excess of that which she would have under normal conditions.

Although the longshoremen refuse to handle freight for any ship flying the British flag, it was disclosed today that they made no objection to loading the American Shipping Board craft, the Waneonda, at Charlestown, despite the fact that she carried a cargo of British and German made goods.

New Orleans, Sept. 4.—Longshoremen here may be expected to go on strike at any time in sympathy with Lord Mayor Terence MacSwiney of Cork, who is hunger-striking in Brixton prison, according to an announcement today by Harry Keogan, president of the White Longshoremen's Union.

Roderick, the New York agent, were held in $5,000 each for the United States District Court, on the charge of allowing stowaways to land in the United States. Their arrest was the result of the escape of twenty-eight stowaways from the Mormugao on the night of August 10, the day the vessel arived here from Lisbon.

Ware's testimony followed that of Frederick R. Swift, a former Boston broker, who declared the advertisements which Ware issued, in his belief, were justified on the basis of the contract he held in the Gatex Company, an oil producing organization.

JURY RUSHING PONZI CASE

Many Witnesses Called Today in Order to Complete Probe Quickly

Several more witnesses, many of importance, were called before the Suffolk County Grand Jury today to testify regarding their business relations with Charles Ponzi. Although today would normally be a court holiday the authorities decided to hold session in order to complete the probe as quickly as posible.

In the meantime the investigations being quietly conducted all over New England into the transactions and methods of the defunct promoter are being rushed to completion to permit the sending of an early report to the bankruptcy receivers.

These officials announce that another hearing will be held shortly, perhaps early next week, and that Ponzi will again be examined, this time at greater length regarding his assets.

Although considerable disappointment was felt among the ranks of the Ponzi "investors" when no report of the promoter's assets was given out by the receivers, following the announcement of Federal Auditor Pride's report, the officials announce that the complex nature of his assets will necessitate at least several days' more work on them when, it was asserted, at least a preliminary report will be made public.

One of the reasons why the receivers are having such difficulty in marshalling his assets is the lack of complete records. Mr. Pride's audit clearly indicated that Ponzi kept no record of thousands of dollars which he paid out and this, with other evidences of carelessness, mean a further delay before the army of "investors" know exactly just how much money they are going to get back.

Bank Closing Causes Panic

Consternation reigned among about 100 Jewish residents of the South End when the private bank of Jacob Friedstein, at No. 416 Harrison avenue, was closed by Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen.

Men and women clamored about the entrance in a vain endeavor to withdraw their money and discussing the possibility of getting 100 cents on the dollar on their deposits.

Friedstein said that the action of the bank commissioner was unexpected. He declares he is solvent and that after the examination he will be able to pay the depositors in full.

He denies that he holds any of Ponzi's notes or that the closing of the Hanover Trust Co. in any way affected his business. The total deposits in his bank, Friedstein says, do not exceed $40,000.

ARMY CANNOT KILL ERIN'S 'DO OR DIE' SPIRIT, SAYS BOSTONIAN

TELLS OF BRITISH ATTACKS

Declares Ruffians Invade Church and Dance Upon Vestments of Pastor

In the opinion of a Bostonian recently returned from a visit to his old home in Ireland the Do or Die spirit which today animates the sons and daughters of Erin cannot be extinguished by millions of British soldiers.

The Bostonian who returns with this and other impressions of a brief visit is William K. O'Connor, an insurance man, living at No. 10 Taft street, Dorchester. Mr. O'Connor was for six years president of Division No. 72 of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, largest of all Suffolk County divisions of that organization.

"I arrived on the other side on the second day of August. It was my first visit since I left home, sixteen years ago, at the age of twenty-seven.

"My first impressions were favorable. The condition of the country appeared to be wonderfully improved. The land looked better. Dwelling houses were more attractive. These things are due to the Land Purchase act, under which for the first time in centuries the Irish farmer is permitted to buy and own his farm.

"Owing to weather conditions—they had rather more rain than usual—crops are late but in excellent condition. Hay and corn crops will be enormous. Ireland without a British soldier would be the happiest and most prosperous little country on earth.

"But on the third day after my arrival I saw the other side of the picture. A lorry with fifty armed soldiers on board, under command of a sergeant-major, entered Kildorrery and literally shot up the town.

SOLDIERS SMASHED SHOPS.

"Perhaps I should digress here to remind the American reader that one year ago the British searched every man and farm in the South and West of Ireland and confiscated every firearm they could find. No matter what the citizen's standing, he was not permitted to repair even his shot gun.

"The soldiers, armed with guns and bricks, smashed every shop window in the town. They marched into public houses, appropriated all the wine, whiskey and beer they could carry, inside and out, and crazed with drink looted the stores.

"The next day it was the neighboring village of Shanballymore. Here, after looting the shops and terrorizing the unarmed townspeople, they invaded the Catholic Church and, carrying the vestments of the pastor out into the highway, tore them, danced upon them and did even worse.

"'Where were the Sinn Fein and the Volunteer Army all this time?' you will ask, and the answer is that outside of two or three counties in Ulster no party of armed policemen or armed soldiers ventures out anywhere in Ireland today with any assurance that they will return alive.

TAKE AWAY WEAPONS.

"At any minute they are likely to hear the command, 'Hands up!' Of course they are armed, and they have the good sense to throw up their arms, nothing happens except that they lose the guns. If they show resistance, the Volunteers are ready to protect themselves.

"And yet, notwithstanding daily and nightly raids by armed and drunken ruffians, no British court and no British law is recognized today in Ireland.

"The faith of the Irish people in their cause is wonderful to see. No man privileged to look into Irish faces today can ever forget the spirit of Do or Die he sees there. Millions of British soldiers cannot suppress that spirit.

"And the Irish faith in America is equally sublime. It would be better today for all Ireland to be shot down than to tell them that they look in vain for help from the United States. They cannot believe that the nation which proclaimed the doctrine of self-determination and the rights of small nations will continue to champion that right everywhere else and deny it to Erin."

Crew of S-5 Was Saved by Shirt on Broom

Chief Engineer W. R. Grace (at left) and Captain E. O. Swinson of the S. S. General Goethals, which rescued the men aboard the trapped submarine.

By International News Service.

New York, Sept. 4.—W. R. Grace, chief engineer of the freighter General Goethals, whose five hours' work with a hand drill opened a hole in the hull of the American submarine S-5, resulting in the rescue of thirty-seven officers and men, modestly refused to be a hero today.

"It was the signal of distress, the shirt waving on a broomstick, that turned the trick, and not the mere work of drilling the holes," said Grace.

But members of the crew of the Goethals which docked here differed. They said had it not been for Grace's herculean efforts and accurate skill in perforating the navy's hardest steel the rescue might not have been effected in time.

"I was cheered in my work," Grace explained, "by the fact that the men were getting better air from each of the inch holes my tools bored through the submarine's hull. It was impossible to use an electric drill because chlorine gas from the submarine's batteries came pouring out and an electric spark might have caused an explosion.

"And you must remember that my assistant took turns at the drill. After we had drilled sufficient holes, we took sledge hammers and crowbars and completed the opening large enough for men to crawl out.

"It's all in a day's work. I've been in many a tight hole myself, and there seems to be some mysterious guidance which brings help at the right time. Anyone would have gladly done what we did. We do not deserve any particular praise."

FURS VALUED AT $10,000 GONE

Four Men Are Arrested and Accused of Stealing From Down Town Store

Four men were arreseted today charged with stealing furs from a down town store. The furs are valued at $10,000.

Julian Bernce, twenty-two years old of Revere, and James Calhoun, seventeen years old of Somerville, window dressers for the store are alleged to have taken the furs.

James Moore, nineteen years old of South Boston and James S. Walsh, thirty-five years old of Brookline street, are charged with conspiracy and larceny. Another man is being sought by the police.

The police charge that the employes of the concern took the furs while engaged in window dressing, placed them in delivery boxes and left them in a freight elevator where they were taken by another person and left at the home of one of the defendants.

SEEK AUTOS TO CONVEY VETERANS TO THEATRES

Mrs. Bradstreet Parker, of the Red Cross staff at the Parker Hill Hospital, has 100 tickets each for "Look Who's Here" at the Arlington Theatre and "Mrs. Jimmy Thomoson" at the Plymouth Theatre, for Labor Day, September 6. She is having great difficulty in securing a sufficient number of cars to transport 200 disabled veterans to the two theatres on that day, and she will appreciate it if anyone who will assist with their automobiles will notify her at the hospital.

If transportation cannot be provided many of the men will be unable to attend the performances and thus lose the pleasure they might otherwise have. Mrs. Parker can be reached by telephone at the hospital, Brookline 7400.

The Lafayette service will be preceded by an outdoor service on the porch, led by a vested choir of men, with violins and trumpet.

MILL HELP WILL REDUCE OUTPUT

Plan 'Regulated Production' in Lawrence to Prevent Shut-down of Plants

Lawrence, Sept. 4.—That the mill operatives here and in other textile cities, who are members of the Amalgamated Textile Workers of America, will soon be following a program of "regulated production," is the statement made by Ben Legere, local head of that organization. The workers will discuss the new plan at meetings tonight and tomorrow afternoon and prominent radical leaders will address them.

"A committee is making a complete survey of the work done by operatives in Lawrence mills and the mills in other cities where the Amalgamated Textile Workers have branch organizations" said Legere, "and the time is not far distant when the 'speedup' program of the mill heads will be a nonentity.

CHARGES LOCKOUT PROGRAM.

"It is our belief that the mills have a set program of locking the help out every year. We do not doubt that the American Woolen Company in closing its mills last July knew well that they would open exactly on a certain date, and that date is announced as September 13.

"We have reason to believe that the election has nothing particular to do with the close down this year. The idea is to get the most out of the workers during the most of the year by speeding them up in production, only to lock them out for two months or more at a saving to the employers."

GIOVANNITTI TO SPEAK.

Legere terms the closed mill gates as a "permanent institution," and says that the strike of 1919 prevented a similar occurence in that year. He declares that the workers will benefit by the survey now being made as they will know when to slow down in production in order to keep employed twelve months in the year.

Arturo M. Giovannitti, who will be the chief speaker at the dump lot meeting to be held tomorrow afternoon, will outline the plan more definitely.

WHOLESALE PRICE OF ICE GOES HIGHER

There will be no increase in retail prices, the company states.

PASSENGERS GO AS 'BAGGAGE'

Standing Room Only for Smokers on New Haven Train to Whitman

The substitution of a sixty-foot baggage car for a "smoker" on the Whitman line of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad has started a storm of protest from the patrons of that part of the system.

The first appearance of the baggage-car-smoker was last evening on the train which leaves Boston for Whitman at 4:48, standard time.

Usual occupants of the smoking car gathered in the forward coach when the train was assembled on Track No. 26.

Hardly had they become seated when the engine, to which was attached the long baggage car, backed into the station and was attached to the train. Conductor Marshall announced that the smoking car was ahead. The passengers went forward to find that the "smoking car" was an ordinary baggage car, without seats, and unswept.

The passengers immediately demanded of Conductor Marshall the reason for the innovation.

The conductor said that there was a shortage of cars and that the management had threatened to take off the smoker.

The Whitman train is an accommodation affair, stopping at Norfolk Downs, Wollaston, Braintree, South Weymouth and other stations along its route. It is always crowded.

"This is an outrage," said Albert C. Rhodes of Wollaston. "For the New Haven to charge for service like this is a preposterous condition."

W. M. Whiting declared the only reason he could ascribe for the innovation was that foot room was lacking in the regular coaches.

F. B. Clark of Rockland said: "I have patronized this road for twenty-five years, and while the service has always been bad, it has never been reduced to this. This is without doubt the greatest outrage ever perpetrated upon a riding public."

Even the baggage car could not dampen the ardor of the card players, who spread papers on the car floor.

NAVAL AVIATOR WEDS IN LENOX

George C. T. Remington Takes Beatrice Clarke as Bride at Society Event

Lenox, Sept. 4.—The wedding of Miss Beatrice Clarke to George Clifford Thomas Remington, in Trinity Church this afternoon, was the leading society event of the season in Berkshire. Each is twenty-one years old.

Miss Clarke is the daughter of Thomas Shields Clarke, artist and sculptor, and Mr. Remington, who is an aviation construction engineer in the navy, stationed at the Great Lakes station in Chicago, is a son of Mrs. Walter Schuyler Volkmar of Lake Forest, Ill.

Eighteen hundred invitations were sent out and the church was filled. The bridegroom, his best man and ushers and Senior Chaplain Rev. Frank Thompson, U. S. N., who assisted Rev. Latta Griswold, rector of Trinity, were in uniform.

An altar cloth of Spanish lace, mounted on gold-colored satin and dating back to 1500, adorned the church altar. The relic is now the possession of Mrs. George C. Thomas of Philadelphia, the bridegroom's grandmother.

The bride's maid of honor was Miss Alma Clarke, her sister. Little Agnes McCrea, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. McCrea of New York, was flower girl and Master Leonard M. Thomas, Jr., of Philadelphia, page. The best man was Thomas Coldecott Chubb of Orange, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Remington are to live at No. 765 Lake road, Lake Forest, Ill., until November, when they are going to Coronado Beach, Cal. for the Winter.

Germany Can't Fight, Says Hindenburg

(Copyright, 1920, by the International News Service.

Hanover, Germany, Sept. 4.—"Germany commence a new war! Impossible!" Germany's "war god," Von Hindenburg, frowns at the mention of young Prussian officers eager for a war of revenge against France.

In the booming voice of an army officer who has seen much service in the field he denies that he has any liking for another war or that his native country has any war-like aims. He laughed and slapped his hands together when told that a large part of the world still regards Germany as a military menace.

Hindenburg is living quietly at No. 32 Seelhorst street. Despite his 73 years, he is alert and has the straight figure of a soldier.

"It is ridiculous for any thinking man to assert that Germany is in a position to undertake a new war," declared the old soldier. "We have not enough troops left to maintain order in Germany. As a matter of fact it appears that the allies do not want us to maintain order. It is impossible for Germany to attack France.

HAS NO ARMY NOW.

"Germany has no army, no artillery, no aircraft and no munitions. How could she go to war? No ocean separates her from her enemies. Many months are necessary to prepare for war, and you will notice that France has not been idle.

"Germany needs an army. Russia will soon be knocking at our eastern door. If Russia succeeds in breaking through the Polish line, it is difficult to say whether the Russians would arrive at our frontier as friends or enemies. It is hard to judge Moscow's intentions.

"It would be best for us and best for France if we were allowed to prepare for any contingency in the east. It is quite possible that Moscow will maintain neutrality. But if Moscow is not neutral, if she should decide to establish a soviet government in Germany, then Bolshevism would sweep over our borders into France.

SOVIET CAVALRY IS GOOD.

"The Russian cavalry, it seems to me, is good. The rapid advance of the Russians toward Warsaw was due to the cavalry. The Russian infantry is no good. Also the Russians have no heavy artillery.

"I believe that certain of the German working classes have secret military organizations which are to be used in overthrowing the present German government and supporting the Russian form of government among us.

"America's decision to adopt a policy of political isolation certainly has been fortunate. In this way the Americans have avoided many unpleasant consequences of the Versailles treaty."

Girl Whose Murder Is Puzzling Police

Miss Rose McKenna, aged 23, of Providence, victim of masked assassin in Great Barrington Parkway, East Providence.

DRAGNET FOR GIRL'S SLAYER

Providence Police Believe Arrest Is Near in Murder of Rose McKenna

that the shooting was the work of a brother of a discarded sweetheart of Deignan's, maddened by the news that he was to marry Miss McKenna.

Coincident with the belief that Miss McKenna knew the masked slayer, there has sprung up a belief that Deignan has not told all he knows about the tragedy. This conviction is strengthened by the conflicting stories told by the wounded man, whose name is still on the danger list at the hospital.

UNABLE TO TELL ALL.

Physicians caring for Deignan fear that embolism may develop. He speaks with difficulty and has frequent coughing spells.

In view of his condition, the physicians restrict the authorities in their questioning of him, and they have not as yet had a satisfactory and complete interview with him.

Deignan has finally admitted, however, that his car was parked in the "no lighted" section of the parkway when the assassin approached and that there was no attempt at robbery.

Investigation has confirmed this. There are tire marks where the wounded man, with his dead sweetheart beside him, drove at top speed back to the main highway after the shooting, and for more than a mile along the highway until he obtained aid.

DESCRIBES MAN'S FLIGHT.

Describing the actions of his assailant after the shooting, Deignan today said "he ran toward the Gulf Refining Company, stopped between there and the Mexpet Oil Company and disappeared behind the Gulf Refining plant."

This corroborates the testimony of Metacomet Club members, who have stated they saw a man running in that direction about the time of the shooting, but did not think his actions strange enough to investigate.

There was a dance on at the Metacomet Club Thursday night, and it is probable the music from the clubhouse aided the murderer by drowning the sound of the shots.

Several suspects have been questioned, but none held. Among the automobiles which are being checked up is one which is the property of a hotel owner at Onset, Mass. It is stated this car was not far from the scene of the tragedy, and that almost immediately after the shooting its occupants held up another car, demanded names, and then drove off without waiting for compliance with their demands.

SAW TWO MEN THERE.

Persons living near the refining plants have informed the police that at least two men of questionable demeanor were noticed in the vicinity Thursday night.

One such man was noticed in the neighborhood of the Kettle Point railroad station about 8 o'clock that night. His actions indicated that he was demented.

Another man, who will be questioned if he can be found, had been sleeping on "The Pinnacle," a wooded knoll just off the parkway, for several weeks.

Police are also investigating the movements of two young men wearing golf caps, who were seen near the Mexpet Oil Company about a half hour after Miss McKenna had been slain and the hue and cry raised for the capture of her murderer.

CHELSEA BOY RUN OVER BY AUTOMOBILE

Leon Pratt, twelve, of No. 137 Walnut street, Chelsea, was knocked down by an automobile driven by Hovsip Bedrosian of No. 23 Orange street, Chelsea, while he was playing in the street near his home. His name is on the danger list at Frost Hospital.

POLES FORCED TO FALL BACK

Bolshevist Army Reports Victories and Claims Capture of 1,300 Prisoners

By International News Service.

London, Sept. 4.—The Poles have been thrown back across the Bug River. There was violent fighting on the east of Brest Litovsk. The Bolshevist forces beat off strong Polish attacks in the direction of Vladimir Volynsky, where more than 1,000 prisoners were taken, according to a communique.

Three hundred additional Poles were captured in repulsing strong Polish attacks against Lemberg.

The text of the statement follows:

"There were combats northeast of Brest Litovsk. We repulsed the enemy, throwing him back to the left bank of the Bug River in the direction of Cholm.

SOVIET TRIES TO OPEN U.S. TRADE

John Reed's Wife Wires Regarding Attempt to Establish Business Relations

By International News Service.

Berlin, Sept. 4.—Soviet Russia has just opened a special governmental department to further trade relations with the United States and Great Britain, according to a Moscow wireless message. The message, sent over the official Soviet radio, is signed "Louise Bryant."

The message reads: "In order to develop relations with America and Great Britain an Anglo-American department has been opened by the Commissariat for Foreign Affairs under the direction of Santori Nuorteva, former secretary to Ludwig Martens, (Soviet) ambassador in New York.

"Important matters are under negotiation. Through its representatives here the Morris Company of Chicago plans to establish salt fish, fruit, vegetable and conserve plants in Russia.

"Negotiations for the sale of tobacco, furs and manganese are being conducted by the commissary of foreign trade through its representatives in New York. Herbert C. Hoover's relief commission in Moscow is discussing with the Soviet government the institution of relief work for children."

Louise Bryant is the wife of John Reed, former American newspaper man who last year was appointed Soviet representative in the United States. Indicted in Chicago for alleged anarchistic activities he fled to Russia, where both he and his wife are believed to hold responsible positions under the Soviet regime.

NEW COUSIN ENTERS SEARLES WILL FIGHT

William L. Searles of Lynnfield, who claims to be a cousin of the late Edward F. Searles of Methuen, who left a fortune of $50,000,000 to his secretary, is the latest relative of the multi-millionaire to announce his intention of contesting the will.

Appearance for Searles has been filed in the Essex County Court at Salem by Healey & Healey, Attorneys, of Lynn. Searles says he was not mentioned in the will.

The Lynnfield relative also asserts that he has a brother in Manchester, N. H., who is going to file an appearance. The case comes up at Salem next Tuesday.

PAY CONTROVERSY STIRS LAWRENCE TEACHERS

Lawrence, Sept. 4.—School teachers of this city are up in arms over salary increases. High school male teachers claim that some discrimination has been shown in the allotment of certain salaries and indications point to a lively session of the school board when the salary question again comes before that body.

Certain high school teachers are in the $2,700 salary class, while others of experience and equally important position in the teaching force of the city are said to be several hundred dollars lower.

1,000 IN FLOWER DAY FOR JEWISH WAR ORPHANS

One thousand Jewish young women and men distributed 150,000 flowers in Greater Boston and its suburbs today to assist in raising money toward bringing 1,000 children, orphaned by the war, to the United States.

The Jewish people of Boston pledged themselves to care for that number of war orphans and they will leave no stone unturned to keep their pledge. If enough money is not raised by the flower distribution other means will be devised.

He served as the city executive during the term 1916-17. For a number of years he had been a trustee of Colby College. He was sixty years of age.

FLOCK OF NEW SHOWS FOR HOLIDAY

Labor Day used to be the first day of the theatrical season in Boston, but here we have half a dozen going full blast now, and the two or three which have waited for the September holiday to resume don't bear any resemblance to the early bird.

A curious looking person, by the name of Raymond Hitchcock, in a piece called "Hitchy-Koo," on Monday will unlock the front door of the Colonial, hand the key to Mr. Lothian, the manager, and say,

"Here, Tommy, keep this for me."

He will probably greet the audience warmly and refer to the critics in a libelous manner and by name. Edward Harold Crosby could put him in jail for the things he said to him in previous editions of "Hitchy-Koo."

But Hitchy is just one of a trio of stars in this show. It isn't his own exclusively any more, and if he hugs any more spotlight than Julia Sanderson or George Huntley it will be because he is the more nimble of the three.

The Two Tuxedos.

The two Als, Al Sheehan and Al Strassman, will do a brother act in the managerial dinner jackets when the Globe Theatre comes back as a legitimate theatre next Monday. Sheehan was business manager of the Tremont Theatre for twenty years during the regime of John Schoefel, and all the regular theatregoers will be glad to see him with a theatre of his own.

"Pitter Patter," which reopens the Globe, is a musical version of Willie Collier's farce, "Caught in the Rain." I hear it makes a good operetta and it contains a real rainstorm, which ought to please the farmers.

Al Strassman, the manager of the troupe, is a veteran agent and newspaper man who has been away from this city for five years and gained twenty pounds for each year.

A Little Stranger.

Fay Bainter is a stranger to Boston, but she has a good guide in the person of Al Dolson—this town is simply reeking with Als—Strassman, Sheehan and the above, the press representative of "East Is West." Dolson knows all the crooked streets, inexpensive restaurants and places where you take the subways, and he can point out the swagger resorts, too.

Miss Bainter got her chance to win Broadway two seasons ago in "Arms and the Girl." This was followed by a huge success in "The Willow Tree," and to show that she was no accidental winner she scored again last year in "East Is West."

This title sounds like a paradox. Aside from the fact that it is mysterious it doesn't mean much except that the heroine is a little Chinese who is exposed to Caucasion conditions. It affords Miss Bainter a great opportunity, I am told, and is unusually interesting and exotic as a play.

More Than New Doorknobs.

I believe I have repeated Artemas Ward's remarks before, to the effect that every Spring the theatres close for extensive alterations and repairs, and when they reopen they have a new strip of oilcloth in front of the box office and a new knob on the front door.

But here we have the Hollis, Colonial and Globe, all of which have been thoroughly redecorated at great expense and thoroughly done over. If you don't believe it, go up and look at them.

Fi, Fi, Vivian.

Vivian Tobin, one of the pretty actresses in "Shavings" at the Tremont, is going to walk down Tremont street one of these days arrayed in Knickerbockers, if Jack Pratt, the press agent of the show, can persuade her. She has the costume already and all she needs is the courage.

It seems there is a dress reform for women campaign in New York, headed by a number of women who have responsible business positions and who believe that now that the girls can vote they ought to discard the skirts, having first provided themselves with attractive knickers. Miss Tobin is a convert.

The girls over in New York don't wear the things all the time, but they exhibit them frequently, have their pictures taken in them and suggest that women generally do not hesitate to put them on for working purposes.

Years ago this might excite horror, but since the women have the vote and already wear skirts that exhibit their knees, the breeches won't reveal much more. I don't see why Vivian hesitates.

New Year's Resolution.

"Nightie Night," which has created a laughing sensation here in Boston, might be termed the result of a New Year's night's revelry, though the story has nothing to do with New Year's. Martha M. Stanley and Adelaide Matthews, the fair authoresses of "Nightie Night," met at a Cape Cod celebration of the ushering in of the New Year, and both being writers of fiction, and other literature, they became deeply interested in a discussion of literary values.

And it was right then and there that they decided to combine their efforts and write a play that would make Broadway sit up and take notice. Of course they didn't write it that night or within the next month but they never forgot their intentions and at the auspicious moment began their collaborating. That it was a distinct hit and one of the best farces offered in several seasons was the verdict of the critics of both New York and Boston—and right on the heels of the remarkable fame and success attending "Nightie Night," they came forth with their second play—bearing the title of "Scrambled Wives"—and it, too, has made its mark on Broadway.

A Little Fashion Stuff.

Madam Jeanette Burson from the Lady Duff Gordon establishment in New York is here with the "Irene" Company. Lady Gordon is the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world. Madam Burson has long been in her employ and is an authority herself on styles and dresses.

"I think the best dressed women in the world are here in the East," is how the madam sizes up the situation.

"During my long experience with Lady Gordon I have found them very discriminating. They refuse to wear fashions that are accepted in London or Paris. They must have creations for their sole wear. When a new customer comes to our Salon we show them our mode gowns and if these fail to attract, we try and interest them with special color plates showing the latest confections of our exclusive artists. Time was when these baits generally landed, but not now. We of course make up any number of wonderful models and carry an assortment of plates and designs, but the large majority of our present day customers insist upon having their own ideas carried out by our staff of designers, and we are compelled to destroy the sketches after the garment is made.

Pops in the Fall

Several seasons ago Fall Pops were tried at Symphony Hall, with some success, and again this year the effort will be made to see if Boston likes light music by a fine orchestra as well in September as in June.

If the plan succeeds it means that the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be kept together for about forty-four weeks in the year, a longer season than any orchestra in the world.

Agide Jacchia will again conduct the Pops. Jacchia is rapidly learning American tastes in music and his programs are growing more ingenious and attractive every season. The Boston Symphony, despite predictions that it would never reassemble, during the strike last Spring, is said not to have lost a man of the band which finished out the season.

Some History.

Gladys Hurlbut, the leading woman of "Mrs. Jimmie Thompson," thinks she has discovered the origin of the shimmy. Miss Hurlbut, who came to Boston ahead of the show, says she discovered a song dating from the beginning of the nineteenth century entitled, "Go to the Devil and Shake Yourself."

"I think the germ of this unpleasant dance may be concealed in this song. It's hard to believe that our supposedly staid great grandmothers ever sang a song like that, isn't it?"

I'll tell you how it is Gladys. That song was probably sung by our convivial great grandfathers when they were alone in the dining room after the great grandmothers had left so that they wouldn't have to see the old men drink four quarts of port and fall under the table splifflicated.

The women of a hundred years ago were ladies, but the men were rummies.

But Pick a Good Tune.

Want a good hint?

Here's one: Write catchy songs! The suggestion comes from Cecil Lean, comedian and star of the musical play, "Look Who's Here," coming to the Arlington Theatre. You can't? Cecil says "Try." Here's his recipe: (1) Get a suggestion—just a seed of a suggestion for a theme; (2) Go into a darkened room and take an easy chair; (3) Concentrate your thoughts on the theme and elaborate it; (4) Jot down your elaboration into prose for the chorus, then arrange it into rhyme; (5) Hum a tune to fit it and call a pianist to place the notes; (6) When the chorus is done the verses just "fall in." Lean knows what he's talking about. He writes his own stage hits and—well, he's a star and one of the best-known and most popular comedians on the stage.

Wandering Jew Nothing on Ferguson.

When was it that Lincoln was murdered? Let's see. 1865, 1920—Goodness, it was fifty-five years ago. Sarah Bernhardt was a debutante, Edwin Booth, a struggling young actor, John Drew and Raymond Hitchcock, and Francis Wilson and Willie Collier were just about being born.

Yet in "The Little Whopper" there is an actor doing a dance with some chorus girl and sending the audience into paroxysms of laughter by his facial contortions who was playing a role in "Our American Cousin" at the Ford Theatre in Washington on the night when Lincoln was shot.

Alongside of W. J. Ferguson, the Wandering Jew was a piker.

Blood Seems to Tell.

Harry Davenport, son of the famous E. L. Davenport, and brother of the illustrious Fanny, Blanche, May and Edgar, plays the role of Doctor Gaunt in John Golden's production, "Three Wise Fools," which opens the current season at the Hollis Street Theatre on Monday. It is strange how sometimes nature links family to family and life to life in certain lines of activity.

Georgie Drew, of the distinguished Drew family, married Maurice Barrymore. Her father, Sydney Drew, married Gladys Rankin of the McKee Rankin family. Doris Rankin, sister of Gladys, married Lionel Barrymore, son of Georgie and Maurice Barrymore, and her other sister, Phyllis Rankin, married Harry Davenport. Thus the four famous families of the stage, the Drews, Barrymores, Rankins and Davenports, are united by marriage.

COLONIAL THEATRE

Beginning Monday night Raymond Hitchcock will present for the first time on any stage his new revue, "Hitchy-Koo, 1920," at the Colonial Theatre. Possibly the greatest groups of stars ever presented in a revue of this kind will then be on view. There is none more beautiful and popular than the foremost musical comedy star, Julia Sanderson, and George P. Huntley is known as England's best comedian. Hitchcock is "Hitchy," and that means a great deal to American theatregoers. Charles Withers is a famous travesty star, and the Mosconis, Charles, Louis and Verna, are the most noted of all foreign dancers who have come to these shores. There are one hundred more in the company and this includes a cast of many favorites and a very beautiful chorus. The revue was written by Glen MacDonough, and it is in two acts and fourteen scenes. The lyrics are by Mr. McDonough and Anne Caldwell, and there are sixteen of Jerome Kern's latest delving into the harmonies he knows so well. Ned Weyburn, whose work is widely known, staged the revue. The production is the most magnificent that Mr. Hitchcock has ever presented, and the costumes will be interesting in showing the work of Madame B. Rasimi, directrice of the Theatre Ba-Ta-Clan of Paris, who came to this country for the purpose of designing and executing the costumes.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE

A merry reminder that leap year is with us will be found in "Mrs. Jimmie Thompson," Joseph Klaw's farce comedy of marital mix-ups, which opens the new season at the Plymouth Theatre with a Labor Day matinee on Monday afternoon. The engagement will continue for two weeks only. This play comes heralded as one of the most amusing comedy attractions of the past season on Broadway, where it ran for months at the Princess Theatre. Norman S. Rose and Edith Ellis are the authors.

The same cast which appeared at the Princess will be seen here. Gladys Hurlbut and George L. Spaulding fill the leads. The other players are: Warren Krech, Beggy Boland, Anita Rothe, Minna Phillips, Thomas A. Rolfe, Daniel Jarrett, Mark J. Elliston, Sara Enright, Gertrude Perry and John Clements.

ARLINGTON THEATRE

At the Arlington Theatre for two weeks only, beginning Monday (Labor Day) matinee, Cecil Lean will appear in his funny musical play, "Look Who's Here," which ran several weeks at the Colonial the earlier part of last season.

Cleo Mayfield is chief of Mr. Lean's support. She, too, is well known for her work in musical shows.

The principal song hits are: "The Bell Hop Blues," "Bubbles," "The Turk Had the Right Idea," "Look Who's Here," "When a Wife Gets Fat," "Love Never Changes," "I Love Beauty."

GAYETY

Rose Sydell's Famous London Belles, with oe Marks as the star, opens a week's engagement at the Gayety Theatre Monday. The London Belles this season is one of the happiest and cleverest burlesque shows that has been in Boston for a long time. Marks is a fast, clever comedian, who does most everything to entertain his audience and his flashes of wit are clean and free from anything suggestive, whether told in song, story or dance.

The supporting company comprise Benny Howard, Mildred Campbell, Dolly Davis, Theda Bernard, James Horton, May Leonard, Rose Sydell, Jr., and the Six Romas.

MALDEN AUDITORIUM

The attraction for next week at the Malden Auditorium will be a production by the Temple Players of Sir James Barrie's comedy, "What Every Woman Knows." This play when presented by Maude Adams proved to be a rival in popularity with her first great success, "The Little Minister," written by the same master of letters. It has been recognized as one of the best written of Barrie's plays, and in addition to his usual thorough and delightful character drawing and whimsies of humor, a sound ness of purpose and principle excelling any of his writings.

SOMERVILLE THEATRE

"39 East," Rachel Crothers' sensational comedy hit, which has been shown in all the leading cities of the country, will be offered at the Somerville Theatre the coming week for the first time in stock. In the hands of the capable Somerville players, and under the careful direction of Kendall Weston, it will receive a full interpretation and one that will be a credit to the author and producers.

GLOBE THEATRE

The Globe Theatre, handsomely redecorated and refurnished, reopens its doors Monday night, under the booking direction of A. L. Erlanger, who has selected for the event "Pitter Patter," a musical comedy of so much promise that it is already slated for a New York run immediately following the engagement here.

With a deliciously funny plot of "Caught in the Rain," William Collier and Grant Stewart's famous farce as a basis, William B. Friedlander and Will N. Hough have written in "Pitter Patter," a musical play that promises to set a new pace for mirth and melody. "Pitter Patter" is not a revue, but a delightful play with songs and dances that grow naturally out of the situations. Mr. Friedlander has caught the spirit of the charming story in his music and lyrics, while Mr. Hough has given the book a dainty touch that retains all the humor of the original farce, while meeting the more exacting demands of an up-to-date musical production.

"Pitter Patter" is in three acts, five elaborate scenes and twenty song and dance numbers.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

A very sensational cinemelodrama will be offered by William Fox at the Boston Opera House, beginning Monday matinee. "While New York Sleeps" is the title of the picture that will, without question, create as much of a stir amongst film fans as it has in New York city where it is being shown at the Lyric Theatre, and turning crowds away daily. It will offer scenes that give one a more vivid idea of life in New York, in the low, middle class, and highest society and no effort was spared to make every scene realistic, and, with the aid of the New York police boat and men on the force, they were enabled to stage some of the most daring robberies and hold-ups, being the counterparts of cases which have baffled the country's greatest detectives for many months. The picture will be shown in three distinct episodes, with a view at life in the whirling, money-mad metropolis, from three angles of life. The first episode will deal with the blackmailer who haunts and breaks up happy homes; the second of the notorious badger game, as played by a wily vamp, and the third one shows just where civilization's veneer is thinnest, where impulse is stronger than reason and men-made laws are defied. Estelle Taylor, Marc MacDermott, Harry Sothern, William Locke and Earl Metcalf comprise the main part of the cast. To the ability of the director to visualize and execute the atmospheric detail much credit is due for in every detail he labored to make it perfect.

BROADWAY THEATRE

Next week's bills at the Broadway Theatre, at Broadway and F street, South Boston, will maintain the high standard set at last night's brilliant opening of South Boston's new million-dollar vaudeville and photoplay centre. It is to be the policy of the Broadway, as directed by J. J. Raymond, to furnish vaudeville specialties worthy of the screen masterpieces of the day.

The vaudeville offerings for the first three days next week include several acts recognized all over the country as headline attractions. Among the entertainers of note are: Daley and Berlew in a whirlwind dancing offering; Marie Stoddard in "The Life of the Party"; Clinton and Harvey, "Reg-lar Fellers," presenting an up-to-date singing and piano offering; The Four Harmonists, a de luxe quartet of high-class vocalists.

Balancing this splendid vaudeville program will be the latest Cecil B. DeMille screen triumph, "Why Change Your Wife?"

LOEW'S ORPHEUM THEATRE

An exceptionally well balanced bill has been arranged for the coming week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre, including superlative vaudeville offerings and first run photoplays of unusual merit. Mary Ann Mack and the Laurel Four are headlined for the initial half of the week, and they will offer a selection of artistic and modern studies in songland. Weir and Crest, "The Yank and the Wop," will offer something new in humor and harmony, in their own inimitable style. Johnny Singer and the Dancing Dolls promise a series of unique dances and novel melodies that will rank them with the foremost exponents of grace and ability. Other acts will include Tribble and Diggs, in "A Darktown Honeymoon," a novel singing and jesting skit; and Cross and Santorio, celebrated exponents of physical culture. The feature photoplay will offer Edythe Sterling and an all-star cast in "The Girl Who Dared," a stirring and thrilling photodrama of the Western plains.

GORDON'S CHELSEA OLYMPIA THATRE.

Keen interest is manifested by Chelsea theatre-goers in the reopening Monday, Labor Day, of the newly renovated Gordon's Chelsea Olympia Theatre. A wonderfully attractive program has been announced and it is expected that the theatre will be packed by the holiday crowds, eager to enjoy the unusual offering of screen features, and to see the magnificently refurnished theatre.

PARK THEATRE

Charles Ray in "Red Hot Dollars" will be the feature at the Park Theatre on Monday and Tuesday. This is the story of a boy's grit, a girl's devotion, and a couple of old men who learn that love is better than hate. Gladys George is his leading lady.

On Wednesday and Thursday Enid Bennett will be seen in "The Woman in the Suit Case."

Douglas McLean and Doris May, co-starred in one of their best pictures, "What's Your Husband Doing?" will be on view Friday and Saturday.

GORDON'S CAMBRIDGE CENTRAL SQUARE

Mutiny on the high seas, as depicted by Jack London, will be the forthcoming attraction at Gordon's Cambridge Central Square Theatre, next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, when "The Mutiny of the Elsinore" will be shown. The story is one of thrilling suspense and rife with situations that make the nerves tingle with excitement.

GORDON'S OLD SOUTH

Annette Kellerman, the world's most noted mermaid, will be shown in a wonderfully thrilling under the water, mile-a-minute comedy drama this week at Gordon's Old South Theatre. The title of the play is "What Women Love," and it is certain to attract hosts of amusement lovers.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA

The most unusual court trial in the history of the world is shown in "Heart o' the Hills," adapted from the story by John Fox, Jr., Mary Pickford's third First National release from her own studios and which will be seen at Gordon's Olympia, Washington street, commencing Labor Day week.

LOEW'S COLUMBIA THEATRE

Attractions for the coming week at Loew's Columbia Theatre will include five acts of high class vaudeville, with a generous portion of singing and dancing, and two exceptional photoplay offerings.

CODMAN SQ. THEATRE

Entertainment of the finest sort is scheduled for the coming week at the Codman Square Theatre, Dorchester, including the offering of four acts of superlative vaudeville, including singing, dancing, jesting and acrobatic feats.

WALKER WHITESIDE

Walker Whiteside will begin a brief engagement of three weeks at the Hollis Street Theatre on Monday night, September 13, at which time he will offer for approval, Robert Louis Stevenson's masterpiece of romantic comedy, "The Master of Ballantrae." Carl Mason is the adapter of this thrilling tale of adventure.

NORUMBEGA PARK

Norumbega Park, with a record of its most successful season, starts Monday on its last full week of the year, although the last day of the season will be Sunday, September 12.

McISAAC says that

"THREE WISE FOOLS" at the Hollis is a sweet and wholesome comedy with a really distinguished cast.

"IRENE" at the Wilbur is a sentimental and tuneful musical affair that people like. Helen Shipman heads the cast.

"NIGHTY NIGHT" at the Park Square is a speedy and hilarious farce of a slightly risque type.

"SHAVINGS" at the Tremont appeals to all classes of theatre goers by its simplicity and ingenuousness.

"THE LITTLE WHOPPER" struck me as a brisk, laughable and thoroughly enjoyable operetta.

The photoplay program is a specially inviting one for next week. For Labor Day, Tuesday and Wednesday the feature will be Jack London's famous thriller, "The Sea Wolf," and for Thursday, Friday and Saturday will be presented Mae Murray and David Powell in "On With the Dance."

The special attraction for the children in the theatre Tuesday and Friday mornings the coming week at 11:30 will be Gloria Joy's famous "kid" picture, "Wanted: A Brother." There will be special holiday features Labor Day, including band concerts.

EUROPE IN BATTLE AND FIRE

Governor Coolidge and other prominent men, depicted in a part of the most spectacular fireworks displays ever seen in New England, will fly at night over the heads of thousands at the mammoth spectacle of "Europe in Battle and Fire" to be staged on the old Huntington avenue circus grounds September 11 and 18.

Aerial bombs will shoot the "men" high in the air, where, as the bombs explode, full-size figures of the Vice Presidential candidate and other notables, with their names in letters of fire beneath them, will float over the scene below. The pyrotechnics, while they will be by far the most sensational series of innovations ever displayed in New England, will merge with equally spectacular scenes presented by a cast of 500 persons, including a mammoth ballet.

FIREWORKS AT REVERE BEACH

Revere Beach, regarded as the most beautiful seashore resort in New England, and frequently referred to as the Mecca of the Millions, will be the scene of the most spectacular display of fireworks shown in recent years. A large number of the most prominent amusement concessionaires of this liberally patronised and famed Summer playground have contracted for the display of fireworks which will be given every evening beginning Monday night, and continuing throughout the entire week. The display will include the very latest creations prepared by the American Fireworks Company. With this spectacular free-to-all entertainment, every amusement situated along this beautiful beach will be open during the coming week.

BIG HOLIDAY DANCE

A big holiday celebration will be staged at the Crescent Gardens Ball Room, Revere Beach, Monday—Labor Day—in the form of a continuous dance from two o'clock in the afternoon until midnight. Two orchestras will be employed and there will be continuous music without a stop from the time the doors open until they close at midnight.

Mr. Addison Fowler, famous as a whirlwind dancer, and his beautiful new partner, Miss Florence Tamara, will give exhibitions Monday afternoon and every evening next week.

Jackson's famous Black and White Jazz Orchestra made the big "hit" of the season last week, and the management has secured this team of selected Jazz players for a reappearance next Wednesday night, in a battle of music with the Crescent Gardens Singing Orchestra. Dancing will be continuous until midnight and this coterie of musical wizards will undoubtedly pack Crescent Gardens to capacity.

OPERA TO HOUSE BIG FILM

A New York version of the notorious badger game is absorbingly portrayed in one act of "While New York Sleeps," a William Fox special which will begin a limited engagement at the Boston Opera House next Monday. The episode relating to the badger game represents an incident in the life of New York's gay revelers, and many scenes showing pleasure seekers at their favorite pastimes are contained in the picture. An entire dancing number is from Florenz Ziegfeld. This scene will be of especial interest to the thousands of people who never miss a performance of either the "Frolic" or its sister production, "The Follies."

Also included in this episode are shots taken within the famous Cafe Palais Royal during the height of revelry. A gorgeous cabaret show is in progress while the diners are enjoying the dancing and the merriment. Here the spectator has an opportunity to see the skilful operation of the professional "vamp," and learns how she lures wealthy men to her lair, there to rob or blackmail them with the assistance of her accomplices, the unsuspecting "husband," who inadvertently turns up at the wrong, or rather, the right time.

Film Star Runs a Ranch.

The remarkable skill with which Miss Edythe Sterling handles her horse in "The Girl Who Dared," the coming attraction for Loew's Orpheum Theatre, is largely due to the fact that she uses her own horse for all her motion picture work. Miss Sterling has at her disposal several hundred horses, and is the owner of a large ranch in Wyoming, on which many of the scenes of "The Girl who Dared" were taken. Her love for all animals is the paramount happiness of her life, and when she is not busy before the camera she is riding about the extensive ranch looking after the welfare of all the cattle—and she can ride her own string of horses at the Spring and Fall roundup. It would be difficult to find a girl who can fire a better shot than Miss Sterling and, though she is not a lover of hunting, when necessity arises she can handle a gun better than any man in the country. With persistent practice she has learned to handle a gun with either hand and hopes some day to manage both hands at once—and this sounds as though she were trying to rival Bill Hart and his sharpshooting powers.

NANTASKET

The steamers will run to Nantasket Beach this year until the first of November, and Manager Frederick L. Lane is providing a special Fall service with many more trips than in past years. The steamers leave hourly from Rowe's Wharf and the extra late boats will still run until the cold weather sets in.

DEMPSEY SAYS HE WILL KAYO MISKE IN BIG BOUT

CHAMPION READY FOR HARD GO

Title Holder Tries Out His Punch on Sparring Partners and Announces He Is Fit

Facts about the big fight.

Principals—Jack Dempsey, champion; Billy Miske, challenger.

Referee—Jim Dougherty, Philadelphia.

Distance—Ten rounds without a decision.

Time—Show starts at 2 p. m. Central Standard Time. The main bout is not likely to get underway until 3:45 or 4 p. m.

Preliminaries—Sam Langford vs. Bill Tate; Harry Greb vs. Chuck Wiggins.

By JACK DEMPSEY,
Heavyweight Champion of the World

Benton Harbor, Mich., Sept. 4.—It seems that the old walloping power is still there.

I tried out both sockers this afternoon and found that I can hit as fast and straight and hard as ever —if I want to. All through my training days I've been as careful as possible with the boys. I hate to hurt them, sorry when I cause them pain or bust them up a little. But I had to try out myself publicly just once to see what the hooks could do—and they are doing very nicely.

All along folks figured that I was hitting with less soap, and less precision. They were right. That happened because I had to hit easy. Hitting easy means a fellow must hit slowly.

This afternoon, wearing the fourteen-ounce gloves, I shot them in with some steam behind them—and they landed. They hurt—they landed at exactly the point at which I had aimed, so I guess the hitting judgment—an absolute need of every fighter—is as good as ever. Maybe it's a little better. Labor Day will prove.

Last Hard Work for the Champion

The workout this afternoon is the last hard one. I'll probably take on the boys tomorrow afternoon for a little work of some sort, but not much, for I've worked myself to the greatest fighting condition of my career.

My muscles seem better able to stand the strain than they did in Toledo, and they are springier by far. Somehow or other I can jump around faster and smoother now than ever before.

And that's going to count an awful lot against Miske.

Reports have it that Billy plans to go into the ring and slug it with me. But I think that is "smoke screen talk."

I don't look for Billy to come out and try any slugging tricks. He knows better and he knows his strong points—boxing and the use of his feet. I know that is what he's going to do when he climbs into the ring with me.

I am all set and ready for the boxing strategies of Miske. I met him twice before. On one of these occasions about the only training I did for the fight was to get myself a haircut and a shave.

Naturally I was slow and not in superlative condition when I went into the ring with him, and his speed—opposed to my lack of perfect fighting trim—saved him.

But nothing is going to save Billy Miske from a knockout beating on Labor Day. I'm collecting scalps. I aspire to Billy's and on Labor Day night I'll hang it along with that of Jess Willard, Gunboat Smith, Carl Morris, Fred Fulton and the others.

PADDOCK, OLYMPIC SPRINTER VERY ILL

London, Sept. 4.—The British empire's relay team defeated the Americans here today in the 880 yard relay race winning in one minute, 39 2-5 seconds. The team is composed of Oosterlaak, South Africa; Butler, England; Hunt, Australia, and Davison, New Zealand.

Charles W. Paddock, California sprinter, was ordered by his physician not to take part in today's events. He is confined to his bed with a high fever and is said to be threatened by pneumonia.

All Bouts Off at Revere

Mayor Walworth has clamped the lid down tight on boxing shows in this city until after the appointment of the Boxing Commission.

PROS AND PURES TO MINGLE

Belmont Spring Country Club to Conduct Best Ball Tourney This Week Friday

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

Professional golfers in Massachusetts have had but little opportunity to play in competition this season. While there have been tournaments galore for the amateurs, few events have been scheduled for the professionals. This is hardly right, but it is not too late to give the professionals an opportunity before the ground becomes frozen.

Belmont Spring Country Club will give the professionals a chance this week Friday, when an amateur-professional baseball event will be held. Other clubs would not make a mistake by arranging for similar tournaments, or by holding a one-day, 36 holes, medal-play event for the professionals.

Professional Tournaments Should Be Encouraged

The United States open championship at Toledo did not bring any honors to Massachusetts and this State will lose its one-time standing in national golf unless the professionals are given an opportunity to develop their competitive game. They cannot be expected to show well in the important championships if they have to develop their game while shooting around the home club with amateurs.

Traveling about the Massachusetts clubs one hears of a number of professionals who are going at a fast clip. These golfers should be given an opportunity to show their speed in competition. Monday is the best day for professionals to get off and they would gather this Fall without any elaborate purses to draw them. Of course some sort of money prizes should be put up, but the pros would help to contribute to such with entrance fees and club members could make up the rest for the good of the game hereabouts.

NATIONAL TENNIS IN SEMI-FINAL ROUND

New York, Sept. 4.—Williams M. Johnston will meet G. Colket Caner of Boston, and Wallace F. Johnson went against William T. Tilden, 2d, of Philadelphia in the semi-final round of the national singles championship at the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills today.

Johnston defeated Watson M. Washburn of New York, 6-4, 6-4, 7-5; Johnson won from Clarence J. Griffin of San Francisco, 6-1, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4; Tilden eliminated Walter Kesbrook of Detroit, 6-3, 8-6, 6-1, and Caner bested Irving C. Wright, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2, in the round before the semi-final.

Zbyszko-Gardini After Bout With Stecker

By JACK CONWAY.

Wladek Zbyszko, Polish wrestling champion, will parade up and down Tremont street tomorrow. He is coming here a little in advance of his finish mat bout with Frank Yosko, Lithuanian champion, which will be held at the Revere Cycle Track on the afternoon of Labor Day.

Zbyszko has taken great pains in training himself for his conflict with Yosko. The Polish star has an idea that he can beat Champion Joe Stecker if he can secure a return engagement with the Nebraskan. He believes that if he should wallop Yosko he would be in a position to secure another contest with the title holder.

Inasmuch as Yosko also is eager to get a tussle with Stecker there should be plenty of action at the beach oval on the holiday.

Renato Gardini will oppose Bill Demetral of Chicago in another feature match and he is also after a return match with the title holder.

The Fenway A. A. will apply for a license as soon as the Boxing Commission begins functioning. Its opening show will probably see Young Kloby pitted against Paul Doyle. The Y. D. champion has agreed to battle for Matchmaker Roy Green. The latter rightfully believes that Doyle would make the best opponent for the Lawrence idol. There are thousands of boxing fans throughout New England who believe that Doyle would be able to trounce Kloby in a return meeting.

Ball players have only to study the history of their profession a little to learn that they are not the important part of the pastime.

The game's the thing.

The ball player lives, and flourishes his little hour, then passes on. The game survives. No man is superior to the game. No man can make such an impression on the game that his loss will leave a void that cannot be filled.

Babe Ruth, Tris Speaker, Ty Cobb, George Sisler, Joe Jackson, Roger Hornsby and all the rest of the ball players now in the two big leagues could retire permanently tomorrow. The game would still go on.

It might be handicapped for a few days, or a few weeks. Then there would be other men in the uniforms playing the game. The fans would remember the Ruths, and Speakers, and Cobbs awhile, but meantime new Ruths, and Speakers, and Cobbs would be in the making.

Incidentally, new fans would be in the making. They would not recall the stars of another day. Presently the old Ruths, and Speakers, and Cobbs would be forgotten, but baseball would go on.

The game's the thing.

It is so with any other business, and with life itself. A man may make a certain stir, and rise to certain heights, but when he passes along, his game will continue.

No man is ever more important than his game, whether it is playing ball or clerking in a store. Young men should bear that in mind if they feel their heads getting a little swelled. They may have made themselves very useful, but when they are gone and forgotten, some one else will be playing their game.

Cubs' Manager Denies Betting Charges

Pittsburgh, Sept. 4.—Manager Fred Mitchell of the Chicago Cubs, who are playing a series here with the Pirates, denied today any knowledge of any scandal among the members of his team as indicated in stories from Chicago. He said:

"You can say this for me: I have absolutely no knowledge of scandal involving the members of this ball club, and should anything be proved you can bet that the guilty parties—if any should be found—will have no further connection with this team.

"This is the first time I have heard of the gambling charges. I know nothing about them and have no even previously heard any rumors that there had been any gambling.

"The game referred to was not a listless game, but was a very good one and there was but one legitimate error made.

"I have confidence in my players and don't take any stock in the charges. If any action is taken it will be lodged with the president of the club, no me."

Invents Chessplayer to Beat the World

Paris, Sept. 4.—An automatic chessplayer, guaranteed to beat even the champion players, has been devised, it was announced to the Academy of Science by Torres Y. Quevedo, the Spanish inventor, who designed the machine. It is a mechanical calculator and operates instantaneously.

"Chess," the inventor declared, "is merely a matter of mathematics. It is easily solved by an instrument capable of all mathematical calculations."

NOTHING TO IT BUT GIANTS

Braves' Errors Contribute to the Downfall of Dick Rudolph on Polo Grounds

New York, Sept. 4.—There wasn't much of anything to the first clash of the present series on the Polo Grounds, except the Giants. The Braves placed because there were only two teams in the game, not on the strength of anything that they accomplished or that they ever came close to winning.

Richard Rudolph, one-time Giant killer, was on the mound for Boston and was found for ten safe swats, most of which were used to great advantage by the McGraw clan, as were the errors made by the Tribesmen. These latter numbered but four, but a couple of them were most expensive for Bald Dick and nullified the assault of the Braves upon Fred Toney.

The Giants scored twice in the first inning on a pass, two hits and an error by Cruise. A couple of hits, a walk and a sacrifice fly in the second inning spelled another tally. Then the Giants laid off until the last half of the sixth, when a flock of hits and very woozy errors by Boeckel and Mann, resulted in four large runs. The Braves made a couple of runs in the first half of this inning, but they were merely incidental and only pleased those players whose hitting entered into the manufacture thereof.

KING OF SPRINTERS AT REVERE BEACH OVAL

Frank Kramer, is paying his annual visit to Boston today and the king of the bike sprinters declares he will show the fans that he is just as young and as speedy as ever when he is pitted against Moeskops, the champion of Holland, in a special sprint match at the Revere Cycle Track tonight.

The veteran champion, who has held the title for some sixteen consecutive years, has a warm spot in his heart for Boston and has always made it a point to have at least one race here included in his season's contract.

Moeskops is somewhat of a stranger to the local fans but those who have followed the sport are well acquainted with his work at other tracks and he is a worthy rival for the champion.

Manager Butler has also arranged a one-hour motor-paced race with Hill, Didier, Lavalade and Wiley on the mark.

The amateurs and pros will also have their regular card of events.

CARPENTIER CONFIDENT AS HE STARTS FOR U. S.

After that I will be in readiness for a contest for the world's title if Dempsey is willing."

Mme. Carpentier shouted as the train rolled out: "Good luck, Georges, give my love to America."

RUTH HONORED BY K. OF C.

Home Run King Has Day at Fenway Park—Big Crowd on Hand

By NICK FLATLEY.

Battering Babe Ruth, the most spectacular individual baseball has known, came into his own this afternoon at Fenway Park. The friends of the slugger, who knows more about hitting than the bird who made the first bat, gathered to do honor to the "home run king."

Once more the Babe packed the park, as he has done time and again, when he registered from this corner of the world. He represents the enemy now, but still he's the greatest favorite Boston's generous public has ever lauded.

His mighty thumps have kept the New York Yankees up on the crest of the glorious American League struggle, and the native populace turned out this afternoon to pay him tribute, although nine out of ten fans hereabouts are pulling for the Indians or the White Sox.

KNIGHTS ATTEND GAME.

Members of the Pere Marquette Council, Knights of Columbus, staged the big day at the Fenway, where a double header and the continuance of the Red Sox struggle to ruin league leaders would have attracted a great throng, anyhow.

With the genial Babe as the recipient of gifts and the guest of honor and everything, the afternoon resembled the good old days when the Red Sox were always in the pennant scramble and had more friends than an automobile owner has troubles.

There was a band concert on, before the dual tilt started, and right through the long afternoon's ballgame Jimmy Coughlin's 101st Regiment musicians furnished the melody, which is the same as to say that said melody was as good as there is in these parts.

GIFTS FOR PLAYERS.

The Knights of Columbus were present by the thousands, council after council having reserved sections in the big stand. The Babe was the real hero of the occasion, but the other Knights on the contending teams came in for some share of attention.

Appropriate gifts were handed out to Bullet Joseph Bush, Mike McNally, Mike Menosky and little Mister Brady, the brothers of the Red Sox, to Wallie Pipp, McGraw and Lacey of the New York troupe.

Battering Babe, member of the Pere Marquettes, was due to collect a pair of finely gemmed, suitably inscribed cuff links, as a fitting souvenir of the great day.

LINCOLN B. B. CLUB AGAIN BEATS BENNETTS

Tommy McGrath, diminutive hurler of the Lincoln B. B. C., pitched his team to a 1 to 0 victory over the Bennett A. A. in the second and concluding game of a series between these two teams at Lincoln Park, Somerville. From the very beginning the game developed itself into a mound duel between McGrath and Art Welsh. A two-ply swat by Crowley sent across the winning tally. An unassisted double play by First Baseman Jack Lynch of the Bennetts featured. He cut across the diamond from first to third to complete the play.

RED SOX BID $7,500 FOR $10,000 PITCHER

Hartford, Ct., Sept. 4.—The Boston Red Sox have put in a bid for Pitcher George Pennington of the Hartford Eastern League club, offering $7,500, according to announcement here today.

Manager Barrows of Boston is anxious to have Pennington join the Red Sox at the close of the Eastern League season, September 12. Manager Clark of Hartford said whoever gets Pennington must part with $10,000.

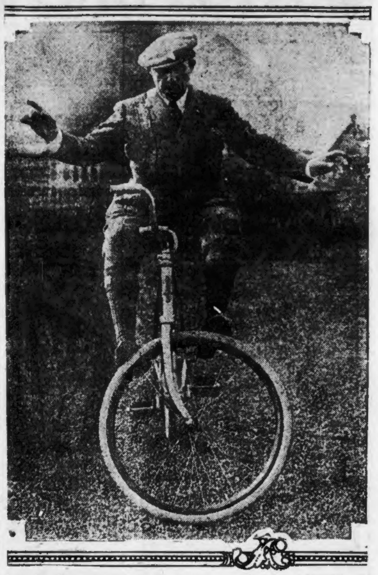
American Run Attracts Many Outside Boston



Fred St. Onge, director of the bicycle run, Sunday, September 12, illustrates another standing still trick in his series.

Hundreds of bicycle riders have entered their names for the big social run under the auspices of the Boston American, Sunday, September 12, from Copley square to Chestnut hill reservoir. The enthusiasm of riders, young and old, throughout Greater Boston, has been aroused over the event.

Old-time riders, who haven't sat in a saddle for years, have signified their intention of going on the outing to the spot near the old well which brings back memories of by-gone days. Many of the old-timers will ride high-wheeled "ordinaries," in use before the present up-to-date cycle with pneumatic tires came into existence.

St. Onge is to act as official pacemaker for the American's run, and will give an exhibition of trick riding at the reservoir, doing the "stunts" that made him famous on the vaudeville stage. His tramp act is remembered by thousands.

FIX MEETING PLACES.

The six high-grade $70 bicycles to be given away free by the Boston American for the best form displayed by riders during the run has proved a big magnet. Entries continue to pour in on the bicycle editor from every district. Riders from several sections will go in a body. John F. MacDonald of No. 493 Broadway, South Boston, assured the bicycle editor that 200 riders would start from his place in a group.

W. L. Potter of No. 1108 Massachusetts avenue, former member of the old Roxbury Bicycle Club and Shawmut Bicycle Club, expects 200 Cambridge riders to start from his place. They will assemble there at 1.30 p. m. and proceed in a group to Copley square. Riders are expected from many far away points, including Worcester, Springfield and Taunton.

From Taunton "Altie" Barber, a rider of renown, will head a large delegation of wheelmen. Dave Harvey, captain of the old Somerville club, and his brother George have signified their intention of being on hand. Ernest B. McKim, an "old-timer," said: "I'll be there if I have to walk."

Free refreshments are to be served at the reservoir and a high grade entertainment will be furnished, including singing by well known vocalists.

The following is a list of the latest entries:

In the accompanying photograph another spectacular feat on a bicycle is shown by Fred St. Onge, the famous trick rider, who will direct the Boston American's bicycle run to Chestnut Hill reservoir, Sunday, September 12. This stunt is comparatively easy and can be accomplished by bringing the bicycle to a standstill with pedals in horizontal position. Tilt front wheel to the left. Place both feet on the tire. By moving back and forth you can attain a standing position. When the balance is maintained the rider can remove hands from handle-bars.

Who Is Gen. Shanks? Here's the Answer

Everybody in this jurisdiction who desires to get in touch with the new commander of the First Corps Area, U. S. A., is hereby advised to let the matter rest until Monday.

Major-General David Carey Shanks will be tied up all day today and for the greater part of Sunday in important conferences at Saunderstown, R. I., with "Admiral" William E. Malloy, Jr., of the United States Navy.

"Admiral" Malloy is believed to be the only person connected with the Navy who can play horse with a Major-General of the Army. He is—as you may have guessed—General Shanks' grandson. His age is eighteen months.

GEN. EDWARDS RIGHT.

In the opinion of everybody who has business with the Chauncy street headquarters of the First Corps Area, Brigadier-General Clarence R. Edwards was right—as usual—when he said:

"General Shanks is a fine soldier and my friend. Everyone in New England will love him."

Shanks refers to Edwards as "Clarence."

They were at "the Point" together (meaning West Point), for three years, Edwards being graduated with the class of '83 and Shanks coming out in '84. Edwards is sixty and Shanks fifty-nine years old.

Does any young man of forty look upon a man of fifty-nine as "old"?

The only thing elderly about David Carey Shanks is his close-cropped hair. His clean-shaven face is bronzed with the brown of the out-of-doors. He is 5 feet 11½ inches tall, weighs about 215 pounds, is hard as a rock and straight as a West Pointer ought to be. And—observe, you self-satisfied forty-year-olders—Shanks wears a forty-inch belt and finds it roomy.

A GOLF ENTHUSIAST.

What more can we learn, right away, about the new "boss" of the Army in New England

Well, what does he like?

How about golf?

"Yes," General Shanks said yesterday, "I take one afternoon a week for golf and should like to take more. I love the game but play it miserably."

The theatre?

"As often as I can afford it."

The movies?

"Sometimes."

Baseball?

"A fan!" (Great admirer of "Babe" Ruth; wants to meet him.)

Horse racing?

Although he is a Virginian, confesses that he has not been interested in horses. Rather regrets it. Has had an idea that racing was "dying out." Would regret to see the passing of the thoroughbred, because of the value of the horse to the Army.

And what are his immediate plans?

First of all, the new commander says, to know New England and the people of New England. As soon as may be, he will make a tour of the six States, meeting the Governors and their adjutant generals. On the way he will inspect every army station in the area. He has yet to see Camp Devens.

From August 1, 1917, until September 9, 1918, General Shanks was in command of the Hoboken Port of Embarkation.

He had been promised command of a division, but it was not until the Fall of '18 that the promise was made good. Then, having his choice of camps, he picked Camp Kearney, Calif., and the 16th.

NEVER GOT TO GERMANY.

But going into Germany at the head of a division was not to be. Along came Armistice Day, and December 5, 1918, found Shanks back at Hoboken, to receive 1,400,000 of the 2,000,000 Americans who had sailed across the seas.

In the Shanks family, the favorite musical selection is the "Army and Navy Forever." There are two Shanks daughters, one the wife of Captain Stephen J. Chamberlin of the army, transportation officer in the Panama Canal Department, and the other the mother of little "Admiral" Malloy (here pronounced Mal-loy, with the accent on the first syllable) whose daddy is Lieutenant-Commander William E. Malloy of the Navy, now taking a post-graduate course in electrical engineering at Columbia University. (Of course you knew that electricity will move the battleships of the future).

General Shanks hopes to be "settled" in Boston along about September 25.

PYTHIANS VISIT PILGRIM MONUMENT

Hundreds of Knights of Pythias of Massachusetts made the pilgrimage from Boston to Provincetown today to honor the Pilgrim tercentenary and to visit the Pilgrim monument.

The committee in charge of the trip included:

Dr. Herbert C. Perkins, recorder of Cambridge Company, No. 30, chairman; Harry A. Hartford, lieutenant of Hub Company, No. 4, of Roxbury, and W. G. Dimmock, lieutenant of Marathon Company, No. 37, of Brookline.

FRANCE TO SHIP GOLD TO THIS COUNTRY

Within a few weeks, it is understood in New York, France will ship from $80,000,000 to $100,000,000 to the United States. If receipts total the latter figure some British gold may be included. The first shipment is $5,000,000 and now on the Atlantic, being due in New York on Monday. A consignment to be shipped from Havre today is understood to be $6,000,000.

The gold is forwarded as part payment of the Anglo-French loan, which matures on October 15.

$1,600 STOLEN FROM COAT IN CHELSEA FACTORY

A bundle of $20 bills, amounting to $1,600, was stolen from the coat pocket of John J. Cowan, superintendent of the United States Indigo & Chemical Co., No. 96 Broadway, Chelsea.

The coat was hanging on a chair in the private office with Cowan's vest at the time the money was taken. A short time before the loss of the money was discovered a young man entered the place apparently on a business errand.

Meet Gen. Shanks and Agree with Edwards

New England, meet Major-General David Carey Shanks, an officer and gentleman from Virginia.

General Edwards was right, every one in New England will love Shanks.

Only one person in the navy dares to play horse with Major-General Shanks, and that's a family secret.

Likes golf, goes to the theatre as often as he can afford to, patronizes the movies sometimes, admits he's a fan and wants to meet "Babe" Ruth.

Born in Salem, but never saw New England until this Summer. (It wasn't our Salem.) Is nearly 6 feet tall, weighs 215 pounds and has plenty of room in a 40-inch belt.

REPORT FRENCH LOAN TUESDAY

Financiers Expect it Will Go With a Whirl; Contains Redemption by Lot Feature

Stock Exchanges Are Closed Today in New York and Boston

By BROADAN WALL.

New York, Sept. 4.—Petroleum stocks were leaders in the Wall Street market yesterday, and the rails did practically nothing. Of the oils, Mexican Petroleum was the most active, scoring an advance of nearly six points on a rumor that there had been further favorable developments in Mexico affecting this company. Texas Oil was second in importance on a rumor of another stock issue soon to come.

The coppers were strong and the tobaccos held well. The steels scarcely moved, while the rails showed evidence of profit taking.

The French loan will be announced on Tuesday, and as it will contain a redemption by lot feature like that of the Belgian loan, Wall Street expects it to go with a whirl.

Money renewed at 7 per cent. and loaned as low as 6 per cent.

Copper stocks continued strong because trade conditions are such that they are likely to have large earnings in the near future. The actual business is not yet under way but it is close enough for the insiders to feel that the time has come to pay attention to it in the stock market.

The turn is also near at hand in the tire and automobile business. Kelly-Springfield, for instance, had an advance of two points and there was evidence of good buying in others of this group.

Railroad shares showed unmistakable evidence of profit-taking yesterday. This, however, does not mean that they are through their campaign. Candy stocks showed marked improvement. Loft Continental and United Retail Candy all being higher.

RHODE ISLAND CO. STOCK SOLD AT 23 MILLION LOSS

Providence, Sept. 4—The entire capital stock of the Rhode Island Company was sold at public auction at a loss of $23,997,800 on the original cost. The bid received was $2,200. The stock originally cost the New Haven railroad $24,000,000 when the company was formed to operate that company's trolley interests in Rhode Island.

Java Sug. Resold

This country is not as good a market now for foreign sugar, as it is understood that about 50,000 tons en route from Java to the United States has been recently resold to Europeans and will be diverted at Port Said and Gibraltar to Italy, Holland and other European countries.

CHAPTER XXVII.—Continued

"YES, I'll run up and"——

"I know where they are in your ice box. I'll find them"——

"What nonsense! Wait!"——

She had started already, but swiftly as her light feet sped he overtook her on the stairs; gathered her into his arms, all pink and breathing rapidly:

"Steve—my darling!"——

"I thought you might do this . . . I wanted to see"——

"What?"

"Whether it could happen to me again—what I experienced with you"——

There was a silence; her young lips melted against his; lingered; her arms tightened around his neck. And the next instant she had freed herself, hot-cheeked, disconcerted.

"Oh, it was—quite true"—— she stammered, resting against the banisters with one hand pressed tightly over her heart. "My curiosity is satisfied . . . . Please!—Jim, dear—we ought to behave rationally—oughtn't we?"

Could Not Resist

But she did not resist when he framed her face between his hands, and she suffered his lips again, and again her slight response and the gray eyes vaguely regarding him shook his self-control.

"Will you try to love me, Steve?"

"I seem to be doing it."

"Is it really love, Steve? Do you truly care for me?"

"Oh, dear, yes!" she said, with a quick-drawn breath which ended in a quiet sigh, scarcely audible. Then a faintly humorous smile dawned in her eyes "You're changing, Jim. You always were very wonderful to me, but you also were mortal. Now you're changing; you are putting on a glorious, irridescent immortality before my eyes. I'm quite bewildered—quite dazzled—and my mind isn't very clear—especially when you kiss me"——

"Are you making fun of me?"

"No, I'm not. That's the way with the gods when they start a love affair with a mortal girl. Sometimes she runs, but they always catch her or turn her into a tree or a waterfall or something they can acquire and fence in and visit like a plot in a cemetery. And if she doesn't run away, then she just falls into a silly trance with her Olympian lover, and somebody comes along and raises the dickens with them both. . . . And now I'd like to know what's going to happen to me?"

"You're going to try to fall in love with me first."

"Oh! And then?"

"Marry me."

"Oh! And what will old Lady Civilization say? I told you somebody would raise the dickens!"

"Who cares?"

"I suppose I wouldn't care if I loved you enough."

"Will you try?"

"Oh, dear," . . . She freed herself gracefully, stepped back a stair lower, and leaned on the rail, considering.

"Oh, dear," she repeated under her breath. "What a tangle! . . . I don't know why I've let myself—care for you—in your way. I ought to stop it. Could you stand it?" she added naively. And the reply in his eyes scared her.

"Oh, this is serious," she murmured, "We've gotten on much further than I realized. . . . I remember, when you began to make love to me, I thought it very sweet and boyish of you—to fall in love with your own sister. But I've begun to make love to you, now. . . . And I ought not to."

A Kiss Longed For

"Because you are married?" he asked under his breath.

"Oh, yes. It won't do for me to make advances to you."

"When have you made any advances?"

"I came out here. I wanted you to kiss me. Oh, this isn't going to do at all. I can see that, now!——" She framed her face in her hands and shook her head. "Jim—dearest, dearest of men—it won't do. I didn't realize that I was caring for you in this way. Why," she added, her grey eyes widening. "It is almost dangerous!"

"The thing to do," he said, reddening. "is to tell Oswald."

"I can't tell him!"

"You've got to, if you fall in love with me."

"Oh, Jim, it would be too heartless. You don't know——"

"No, I don't!" he exclaimed impatiently, "and I think it's time I did. You can't be in love with two men at the same time."

She blushed furiously.

"I—he never even touched my fingers with his lips! And you—you take me into your arms with no more hesitation than if I were a child * * * I believe I've behaved like one with you. I'm old enough to be ashamed, and I'm beginning to be."

"Is it because you're married?"

"Yes, it is; I can't let myself go. I can't let myself care for—for what you do—to me. I came out here to give you the chance—ready to learn something—desiring to. I mustn't take any more lessons—from you."

He said:

"I am going to tell Oswald that I care for you, Steve."

To his astonishment, tears flashed in the grey eyes:

"If you do," she said, "it will be like killing something that makes no resistance. It—it's too cruel—like murder. I—I couldn't bring myself——"

"Why? Did you marry him out of pity?"

A Poor Explanation

She bit her lips and stood staring into vcaancy, one hand tightening on the stair rail, the other worrying her lips.

"I tell you," she said, slowly, her gaze still remote, "the only thing to do is to do nothing * * * Because I'm afraid * * * I couldn't bear it. I'd have to think of it all my life and I—I simply couldn't endure it * * * You mustn't ask me any more."

"Very well," he said, coldly. "And I think we'd better go back to the studio——"

As he passed her he paused, waiting for her to precede him. She turned, her hand fell from the banisters and hung beside her; but the slender fingers groped for his, slipped among them, tightened, drawing him partly toward her; and her left foot moved forward a trifle, blocking his way and bringing them closely confronted.

"I—love you," she faltered. "And I don't know what to do about it."

Crushed into his embrace she did not seem to know any the more what she was going to do about it. Her flushed cheek lay hot against his; her hands moved restlessly on his shoulders; she tried to think—strove to consider, to see what it was that lay before her—what she had to do about this matter of falling in love.

But her fast beating heart told her nothing; a lightless happiness invaded her; mind and body yielded to the lethargy; thought was an effort, and the burden lay with this wonderful being who held her in his arms—who, once mortal—had assumed the magic of immortality—this youthful god who was once a man—her lover.

"It's got to come right, somehow, my darling," he whispered.

"Yes—somehow."

"You'll explain it some day—so that I shall understand how to make it come right."

She did not answer, but her cheek pressed closer to his.

A Warning

When they entered the studio Helen, seated by the tea table, rose with a gesture of warning:

"That child is in my room, and Harry is with her. They were standing together over there by the piano when I came out of my room. I saw at once that she was on the verge of something—she tried to look at me—tried to speak; and Harry didn't even make the effort. So I said quite casually, 'It is frightfully close in the studio, Marie. But you'll find it cool in my room. Better lie down in there for a moment.' . . . . They're in there. I don't know what I hope exactly. She is such a dear. . . Where on earth have you two been?"

"On the stairs," said Stephanie. "We started to get something—what was it, Jim? Oh, yes, there's no lemon here"——

"Did you get any?"

"No, we just conversed." She picked up a cake, nibbled it, selected a strawberry and nibbled that, too.

The tea wasn't fresh, but she sipped it, sitting there very silent and preoccupied, with now and then a slow side-glance at her lover, who was attempting to make the conversation general.

Helen responded lightly, gayly, maintaining her part in a new and ominous situation which had now become perfectly recognizable to her.

For these two people on either side of her had perfectly betrayed themselves — this silent, flushed girl, still deep under the spell of the master magic of the world—this too talkative, too plausible, too absented minded young man who ate whatever was handed to him, evidently unaware that he was eating anything, and whose eyes continually reverted to the girl.

A Generous Smile

The smile on Helen's lips was a little fixed, perhaps, but it was generous and sweet and untroubled. A man sat at her elbow whom she could care for, if she let herself go. A girl sat on the other side who was another man's wife, and who was already in love with this man. But the deep anxiety in Helen's heart was not visible in her smile.

"What about that very tragic pair in my room?" she asked at last. "Shall we clear out and give them the whole place to settle it in? It's getting worse than a problem play——"

She looked up; Oswald Grismer stood on the threshold of the open door.

"Come in!" she said gaily. "I'll give you tea in a few minutes."

Grismer came forward, saluted her with easy grace, greeted Stephanie with that amiable ceremony which discloses closer intimacy, turned to Cleland with that wistful cordiality which never seemed entirely confidant.

"Oswald," said Helen, "there's a problem play being staged in my bed-room."

"Marie Cliff and Harry Belter," explained Stephanie in a low voice.

When Hearts Are Trumps

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER LV.

WHEN Arthur Paige got an idea he held fast to it. Thus it came about that during September and October he watched his niece as he had never watched her before.

At times he almost believed that he was wrong in his half-formed suspicion that she was not happy. She was so appreciative of all that John did for her, and he was so considerate of her every whim that the casual observer would have considered the couple's engagement a happy one.

Yet Arthur was not satisfied. He recalled Barbara as she had been six short months ago—bright, merry, full of fun, always ready for a romp, always brimming over with the joy of life. Now she was pale and thin, less talkative than ever before, and unnaturally docile.

Worked Alone

What had wrought this change? Of course, Cynthia would attribute it to the warm weather and to Barbara's suppressed excitement over her wedding plans. But Arthur did not consult Cynthia. In the problem he was facing he preferred to work without her dominant spirit directing him.

First of all, he would study Barbara, being careful that she did not suspect him of doing so.

To this end he introduced again the subject of the birthday celebration he proposed giving her in October.

"Bab," he ventured in an offhand way, "you must make out for me a list of all the young people you want to have at your party."

"Thank you," she said. "But, uncle, won't it be a great deal of unnecessary expense to you to give this affair just because I happen to be twenty-one next month? You know my wedding is costing a lot."

Her uncle asked a question with such suddenness as to startle her.

"Child—why do you speak so often of being an expense to me? Have I ever suggested that I could not afford to do just what I wish to do for you?"

"Why—no—indeed you have not," she stammered. "Only—I know that my father left nothing for my support—and that all these years you have done everything for me—just as if I were your own child. And of course it has been a drain upon you."

"Who," he demanded, "ever told you that your father left nothing for your support?"

She started to reply, then checked herself.

"Who told you?" her uncle persisted. "I never did—did I?"

"No, sir—but it is true, isn't it?"

A light of hope came to her eyes, but died when he answered her honestly.

Blessed Privilege.

"Yes, dear, it is true, and I am glad that it is, since that has given me the blessed privilege of providing for you. I only wish I were to do it for years to come. But you have not answered my question."

She was silent, and out of pity he changed the subject.

It was evident that she did not wish to name her informant. Arthur suspected Cynthia, but preferred just now to let the matter rest.

"Never mind," he said cheerfully. "Whoever told you might have added the fact I just mentioned—namely, my satisfaction with conditions as they have been ever since you came here to live.

"And now, let us settle an important matter. Whom shall we have at the party?"

"I will think about it and let you know," Barbara replied. "I have hardly thought."

"Well, it is high time you began to think about it," the man smiled. "And if you dare even to suggest the word 'expense' to me about it I shall get angry. Why not make out your list now?"

"I promised to go out for a while with John and to be ready at 4 o'clock.

"He and Aunt Cynthia and I are going. Oh, Uncle"—with a sudden change of manner—"can't you arrange to go with us this afternoon? Please do!"

"Where are you going? What's the idea?"

Barbara averted her eyes.

"John wishes me to see some of the rooms in his house," she said dully. "He thinks perhaps I would like some new things bought for them and wants my suggestions.

"Of course, he asked Aunt to accompany us as chaperone. But it will be easier and pleasantaer for me if you come to, dear Uncle. Ah, please, Uncle Arthur!"

First Favor

It was the first favor the child had asked of him in weeks, he reflected. Perhaps if he were to accede to her request he might learn more of the matter he was studying.

"Very well, dear," he agreed. "I will go—if you and John will not find me in the way."

Cynthia looked somewhat taken aback when Arthur appeared on the veranda as John Brandon drove up to the front door.

"Barbara and I are just going with John to look over his house," she explained.

"And I am going, too," Arthur rejoined clamly. "I am as much interested in Bab's future home as you can be."

"Good!" John Brandon exclaimed with a genuineness that warmed Arthur's heart. "Come along. I want your advice about what is to be done—of any changes to be made."

"Why make changes?" Barbara asked as she sat by her lover on the front seat.

"Well," he admitted, "I don't see just why—unless you do. But as it is to be your home you must have a chance given you to express your opinion, you know."

Bachelor Girl's Reflections

By HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1920, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

CALL no man wise until he has made a fool of himself over at least one woman—nor hopelessly foolish until he has made a fool of himself over two women.

Of course, a bachelor apartment lacks all those little home comforts of which a man dreams—but then, again, it lacks so many of those little DIScomforts, of which he never dreamed!

A man begs a woman for "the plain, unvarnished truth"; when in reality he wants it sugar-coated, scented, and spiced to suit his vanity—and even then he can only swallow half of it at a time without choking.

In the social swim there is many a fish who started out in life as a porgie, and is breaking its heart in the effort to finish as "filet-of-sole."

To a woman who is watching her first baseball game it looks, somehow, as though both sides were playing against the umpire.

Women may be free, but we are not yet equal. A girl may have almost as many pockets as a man, nowadays, but she hasn't half the vocabulary with which to express herself, when she has to go through every blessed one of them in order to find something.

Men have been classified as "what women marry." They have two feet, two hands, and sometimes two wives—but never more than one collar button or one idea at a time.

Men will be boys! And the man who marries nowadays is looking, not for a soulmate but for a playmate, not for a guide to heaven but for a guide to amusement.

Two things that can always be found in the dark: The sharp edge of a door—and a pretty girl's lips.

Water's Role in the Body

By Brice Belden, M. D.

WATER is a vital necessity. Of the human body it constitutes about 60 per cent. by weight, and it forms the greater part of all kinds of food.

Water is a great solvent, and the prime object of digestion is to reduce the food to the condition of a watery solution, in order that the necessary absorption of nourishment may take place.

The solvent powers of water also govern elimination of waste and poison by way of the skin and kidneys and lungs. By way of the skin thirty ounces leave the body daily, by way of the lungs fifteen ounces, and by way of the kidneys fifty-five ounces.

To make good this loss of one hundred ounces which leaves the body by three routes only one avenue is available—the stomach. This does not mean that we have to drink three quarts of water every day, as a considerable proportion of the water we need is obtained in the food we eat.

An increased intake of water is necessary in conditions accompanied by fever, and in autointoxication of any sort, to replace the water lost through perspiration in the first case, and to promote the elimination of poisonous matter in the second case.

The taking of cold water in small or moderate quantities promotes the secretion of gastric juice and the flow of bile; it also stimulates intestinal action.

Very cold water should not be taken when one is greatly fatigued or perspiring profusely. If the circulation is vigorous or excited the effect is refreshing. If from fatigue or exhaustion the power of reaction is lowered the effect is depressant.

Warm drinks on the other hand, diminish gastric activity and delay the passage of contents. The drinking of hot water raises the temperature of the body, accelerates the pulse and lowers blood pressure. Drinking too much hot water relaxes blood vessels unduly.

ABOUT OUR GOOD FRIEND Kelly

Copyright, 1920, by The Ledger Syndicate

KELLY

VARIATIONS—O'Kelly, Keely.

RACIAL ORIGIN—Irish.

SOURCE—A given name.

THE author of the lyrics of that once popular ditty on "Kelly from the Emerald Isle" never announced publicly whether he chose that name for the hero of his ballad because it fitted the rhythm, or from a more subtle motive.

As a matter of fact, the name was singularly appropriate to the spirit of this humorous jingle of adventure, because the given name from which the Kelly group of family names is derived means nothing more nor less than "strife."

These family names, however, are very ancient and honorable ones, coming in the majority of cases from the country about Wicklow, in Ireland.

But with them again we have another example of the wide difference between the ancient and modern spelling, with a difference in pronunciation which is much less marked. The given name from which Kelly, O'Kelly are derived is "Ceallach," which certainly does not look like "Kelly," but there is really little difference in the pronunciation of the two. A slight broadening of the first "y," with the restoration of the "ch," which is best described as a softened or aspirated "k" sound (somewhat similar, but not quite, to the German "ch") completes the transformation back to the ancient pronunciation. The Celtic "c" is always a "k" sound. There are modifications, of course, but never to our modern "s" sound. Keely is an Anglicized version of the name.

Joseph Kelley, one of the early settlers of Norwich, Ct., was the first Kelley to come to America, arriving here about 1690.

A few noted descendants of this pioneer were Judge Daniel Kelley, who was president of Cleveland, president being the same then as mayor is now. His son, Alfred Kelley, however, was the first president of Cleveland and when he resigned, his father took his place. Alfred was a distinguished lawyer and was a member of the Ohio Legislature for many years serving both as a Representative and Senator.

He was responsible for the Ohio canal, which is credited as doing for Ohio, what the Erie canal did for New York. Another son of Daniel, Irad, fought in the War of 1812.

The Adventures of Ann

By Hal Coffman

CHAPTER XV.

AS they drove up to the wayside inn among the trees the proprietor was awaiting them. At a knowing look from Harwood he bowed low and said their dinner was all prepared. He ushered them into a quaint little room where a log fire was crackling merrily and where they could look down the valley to the twinkling lights of the city in the distance.

Harwood seemed familiar with the place and had evidently been there before. But to Ann it was all new and wonderful. "Oh, just to have a home like this," Ann exclaimed, "wouldn't it be wonderful?"

"And not impossible, either," said Harwood smiling and bending over her as he removed her wrap. "My place up in the Adirondacks is even quieter and lovelier than this."

At this Ann's companion gave him a quick glance as if trying to divine his thoughts, but Harwood only smiled, lighted a cigarette and excusing himself for a moment said he was going out to speak to the proprietor.

When he had gone Ann's mysterious woman companion whispered to her. "Don't on any account leave this room tonight unless I am with you."

"You are as suspicious as my sister, Betty," Ann laughed. "She's always thinking something terrible is going to happen to me. I'm sure Mr. Harwood is a perfect gentleman at all times, and your suspicions are all wrong."

"Some day I may tell you more," but at present I am unable to," the woman answered her, as the waiter appeared with the first course of their dinner.

Anecdotes of the Famous

In her book of reminiscences, Lady Dorothy Neville tells the following characteristic story of Disraeli: "Mrs. Disraeli, who was a very great friend of mine, was just as talkative in society as her husband was silent. She was indeed a most vivacious woman. I remember her indignation with reference to a photographer suggesting a pose to her 'dear Dizzy' (so she always called him). 'The man said he actually wanted him to be taken leaning on a chair, but I soon settled that, for I said, "Dizzy has always stood alone, and he shall continue to do so!"'"

One of the most noted autograph letters of the Duke of Wellington was obtained by an impudent ruse. The Duke was dunned by a certain "Mr. Tomkins" for his son's washerwoman's bill, whereupon he indignantly wrote:

"Field-Marshal the Duke of Wellington has received a letter from Mr. Tomkins stating that the Marquess of Douro is in debt to his mother, Mrs. Tomkins. The Duke of Wellington is not the Marquess of Douro. The Duke regrets to find that his eldest son has not paid his washerwoman's bill. Mrs. Tomkins has no claim on the Duke of Wellington. The Duke recommends her, failing another application, to place the matter in the hands of a respectable solicitor."

The said "Mr. Tomkins" chuckled over the hoax, and carefully stored the letter for the amusement of future generations.

* * *

One of President Lincoln's careful habits was always to "pay by cheque," but once when a certain colored man who had been doing odd jobs around the White House came for his pay it transpired that he was uncertain of his legal name—negroes who had been slaves often were. Most people would have found it difficult to pay by cheque in those circumstances. Not so the resourceful Mr. Lincoln! He took his pen in hand as usual, and we can imagine with what a twinkle in his eye he commanded the Riggs National Bank of Washington to pay five dollars to the order of "a colored man with one leg." The bank honored the cheque and kept it as a souvenir, considering that so characteristic a memorial of the great President was easily worth five dollars.

Too Good to Waste

In a club one evening a well known actor was telling a story to a number of fellow-players, and there was also present a novelist who suffered from insomnia.

The company, with the exception of the writer, roared at the story.

"What's the matter?" one of the other men asked him.

"Nothing."

"Why don't you laugh at that good story?"

"Well, it's this way. I am going to save it until I get home. I find that I can always sleep better when I go to bed laughing."

WOMAN SUFFERED IN SILENCE

Made Believe She Was Well

A woman of New Auburn, Maine, writes: "There must be lots of women who feel as I did. I suffered in silence many times on account of my pride, but now I know that a good laxative is essential to good health. I pretended I was all right when I wasn't. I had terrible pains, was 'grouchy' and my headaches almost killed me with pain, and worst of all I had a sallow, unbecoming complexion which was not helped by face powders. Why didn't I try to cure myself, rather than pretend? After taking Dr. True's Elixir, I now know that a laxative was what I needed. Dr. True's Elixir is mild and pleasant to take, and works just right for me. My complexion cleared up—bright and ruddy—blemishes vanished, and every one remarked how much better I looked." Mrs. E. J. B. (New Auburn, Me.)

Dr. True's Elixir will help you too. don't pretend any longer.—Advertisement.

LOST SLEEP WITH ERUPTIONS

On Head, Itched and Burned. Cuticura Heals.

"I was troubled with an itching scalp and scratched it until I had eruptions on my head. The eruptions festered and scaled over and itched and burned, causing great irritation, and I lost sleep on account of it. My hair became lifeless and dry and it came out by handfuls.

"I tried different remedies, without success, and then used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. When I had used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was healed, within four weeks." (Signed) Miss Julia Roghaar, 7 Brook Ave., Roxbury, Mass.

Give Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Talcum the daily care of your skin.

NO RENT BOOST HERE LANDLORD PUTTING YOU OUT

Every Man His Own Boss

I have helped over 200 families from the City Tenement to independence. Many started with only a $10 bill and monthly payments of $5 to $10, making a modest start according to their means, and by the help of my 20 years' specializing in this line of business are now the owners of respectable homes and happy, healthy families. No more "Rent Bills," no more "Put Him Out." Their bank accounts are now growing. Vegetables, flower gardens, hens, lawns and shade trees now replace the hot sidewalk and street. I own a large number of very attractive garden lots I will sell you at your own terms, and extend you the same help, courteous and lenient treatment, and offer you my 20 years' of expensive, hard-earned experience to give you the same independence and comfort as my other customers. All I want is the help of honest, hard-working, progressive people, like myself, who are ambitious to become self supporting. I want you to bring your family out to see me so I can show you the 200 actual proofs of my efforts for others. On receipt of your request today for circular telling "How to do it," I will send it by return mail. No one is too poor to make the right start by my method. Write today to MANAGER, P. O. Box 2889, Boston.

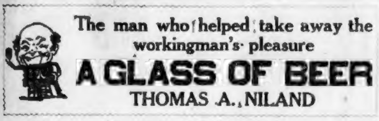
Workingmen Ought to Be Proud of Such an Effort



The man who helped take away the workingman's pleasure
A GLASS OF BEER
THOMAS A. NILAND

This is the picture of the placard by which an opponent of Thomas A. Niland, candidate for re-election to the Legislature from East Boston, is being attacked in behalf of the workingmen.

The workingmen ought to be very proud of this kind of championship. The American congratulates them.

On the other side of the world, however, proud and patriotic men take quite an opposite view from that which this alleged champion of the workingmen is taking on the question of liquor. A gentleman, a man of learning, ability and distinction in his country, one who would grace any community anywhere in the world, met on board a ship lately an American. They fell to discussing the League of Nations and Great Britain's colonial policy. What do you suppose the gentleman from India said was England's most outrageous conduct towards India?

He took from his pocket his pocketbook, he opened it with hands trembling with indignation and he produced a newspaper clipping which gave an account of a raid by the British police in a certain city of England upon an opium joint in which the opium smokers and the opium sellers were arrested. He said, "England lets our poor people in India smoke all the opium they want, destroying themselves by it and will not pass a law to stop it, but they won't let their people in England destroy themselves as our people are destroying themselves by opium."

We suggest that the workingmen of East Boston who happen to be interested in the cause of Ireland's liberty ask Mr. Niland what interests prevented proper organization and real effort by the friends of Ireland at the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco to pledge Mr. Cox and the Democratic candidates to the recognition of the Irish Republic, if they were elected.

Rum cuts a good many ways and almost always across the back of the workingmen.

Gen. Edwards Has Popularity of All Great Leaders

Those who are driving General Edwards from pillar to post seem to consider popularity with the rank and file to be a liability and not an asset.

The great soldiers throughout history have always had one element of strength. They have always been liked by the rank and file which they have commanded. It was the personality of the great commanders almost as much as their military genius which won for them their victories. It was the personality of the great commanders which inspired unheard of labors by their soldiers—the necessary preliminaries of victory.

No commanders who are not popular could have obtained the forced marches and unprecedented recklessness of attack and offence and defence which characterized the armies of Alexander, Hannibal, Caesar, Gustavus Adolphus and Napoleon. Indeed, at the Battle of Arabella it was a difference in the personalities of Darius and Alexander—more than the difference in their military skill—which gave the victory to Alexander and laid the world at his feet. Only a man who had won the love of his soldiers could have carried a great army over the Alps as Hannibal did and lead them into the strange fields of Italy without reserves, without adequate bases of supply, and there, deserted at home, grapple for twenty years with the greatest military nation of the earth. When Caesar leaped into the ranks of his wavering soldiers and seized a shield and fought shoulder to shoulder with them and thus gained the day, it was not the prowess of the arm of a man in middle life, an epileptic and dyspeptic who had not been abstemious in his youth—it was the personality, the popularity of the man with his soldiers.

When Napoleon sank in the morass at Arcola and the Austrian lines passed over him with the French beaten and retreating, it was not Napoleon's military skill that led them to rally and attack again and win the day. It was his personality, his popularity with the soldiers which led them to determine at any cost to rescue their commander or his body.

When an intelligent Englishman, capable of seeing truth through all the false colorings of national pride, told Wellington that the British at Waterloo had not much to boast about because the British outnumbered the French and had the advantage of position and the French were exhausted by the victory they had won over the Germans two days before and their forced march the next day, Wellington replied, "Ah, sir, you have not reckoned in the value of the presence of Napoleon himself on the field. Had he been deaf, dumb and blind his presence would have been worth forty thousand men in the increased fighting capacity of his soldiers."

Among a considerable body of soldiers whom opportunity has never been given to demonstrate military capacity, the capacity to be popular with your men is an evidence of greater soldierly ability in the man who does than in the men who do not possess it, even though they possess the power to make it a liability, not an asset, to the personal fortunes of the possessor.

Return of Healthy Boxing

The new boxing regulations passed by the Legislature last session will become a law, so its opponents now admit.

Those who did not like the law took out a petition for a referendum. Now their time has expired and they have succeeded in obtaining scarcely more than one-fifth the names required for the petition.

There are two comforting things in this development. First, it assures us the return of healthy boxing, which is a part of the general revival of interest in athletics—an interest which Americans must never allow to wane if they would continue to be a healthy, virile, clean-minded race. Moreover, the failure of its opponents to get anything like the required number of names to submit the bill directly to the people illustrates the point which the American constantly made during the discussion of the Initiative and Referendum, namely, that there was little danger of cumbering up the ballot with questions concerning which no considerable body of people were interested. Of course, questions concerning which a considerable body of people ARE interested ought to be submitted.

The Initiative and Referendum is working smoothly. We believe that even its old, bitter-end opponents will not deny the fact.

We Schlant You!

By Margaret Ade Sweeney

("Schlant" is an old Irish word for "salute.")

WE schlant you, MacSwiney—heroic Lord Mayor!
Death holds no terror, life holds no despair
For men such as you, for men brave and true,
Who fear not to die—to die or to do.

WE take off our hats and we schlant you, Lord Mayor!
You who have courage to do and to dare.
For eight hundred years the line has been held
By men such as you who refuse to be quelled.

WE take off our hats, and we schlant you again,
And we vow before God that Justice shall reign!
We shall keep up the fight till Ireland is free,
And England no longer misrules land and sea.

LUCKY PROFESSORS

Members of the faculty of an Ohio university have received an increase of 40 per cent. in their salaries and will now be able to live almost half as well as they did five or six years ago.

TO A WAD OF GUM

Shall I let angry passion sway
Me as I scrape you from my shoe?
Who knows? Some lovely maiden may
Have deemed you a delicious chew.

SHOUT FREEDOM TO YOUR LISPING ONES

Zamora, the Mexican bandit, is said to have released all his American captives. He doesn't say whether he finds his captive quarters overcrowded or merely wishes to let the Americans come home to vote.

To avert government ownership, "the rate of return on railroad property will have to compare favorably with the returns to be had in other industries," says Frederick Strauss. Does that mean 300 or 2,000 per cent.?

Letters to the Editor

Atlantic Avenue Trains

Editor Boston American:

The Boston Elevated is planning to take off the Atlantic avenue trains in about two weeks and run that beautiful line from Dudley street to North Station through the tunnel and around the avenue to South Station and return, which to my mind is a waste of power and time. Do you think the people of Everett and Somerville are getting a square deal when they have to change cars going and coming at the North Station and at night they can't get on the trains which come through the tunnel packed to the limit? We are paying the ten cents and surely are entitled to the best they can give us, for I can't see why if the avenue train works all right this Summer the working people should have to walk half way home in order to satisfy a few people who want their particular line to run whether it accommodates anybody or not.

A LOYAL CAR RIDER.

Must Act Soon

Editor Boston American:

If we want to keep our country free we have got to act soon. The only way I can see is to force our claims. We have faith in neither party. We have got to vote for one or the other. The only thing left for the people is to compel our State to issue a special ballot at the elections. Make it an issue in all States as a State right. It is useless to depend on either Congress, Senate or President. I believe the people desire to be at peace with all countries; that there be no more wars, until a referendum is put before the people and a vote taken on a special ballot, with name and address of each voter. If war is voted, the first to be drafted should be those who vote for war. It is a safe bet if we do have another war the profiteers will have to do the fighting.

Congratulate American

Editor Boston American:

As a straight American, seeing and talking with people of all classes and going from the slums to wealthy estates daily, wish to congratulate the American's stand, and all of the Hearst papers in regards to the League of Nations.

City Must Act in Housing Crisis, Says Governor

GOVERNOR COOLIDGE and Senator William M. Calder of New York, chairman of the United States Senate's special committee on reconstruction, discuss Boston's housing shortage in exclusive interviews in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Both agree it is up to the city to see that its people are properly sheltered if private capital won't—and it has been plainly shown that private capital won't. With the vote of the City Council asking the mayor to put into immediate effect the emergency law passed by the last Legislature, it seems to be up to Mr. Peters.

The Governor says it is as much government's duty to protect the people against suffering from lack of shelter when they cannot protect themselves as it is to defend them against an enemy. He does not believe there is enough free private capital in Boston today to do the housing job.

Senator Calder says Boston is in worse plight than any other city he has seen in his federal investigation. He found private capital unwilling to go into house building here and concludes that the city must come to the immediate rescue, pending remedial action by Congress on a national scale.

The Boston Sunday Advertiser begins tomorrow the publication of an exclusive feature of great importance to all persons interested in business, industry and finance—invaluable alike to the business man and investor. CHARTS! Showing price fluctuations of stocks and commodities over periods of time. Revealing basic conditions and trends at a glance. Giving more real information in a few minutes than can be gained in hours and days of poring over statistics. Making comparisons and deductions easy, rapid and accurate. The charts will be accompanied by brief verbal reviews of the fluctuations and their causes.

Poland is the worst spot on earth, says a Lynn man, just returned with an eyewitness story of the chaos which has enveloped the new nation. The government is unable to curb anarchy and the nation is terrorized by the soldiery. Graft dominates Poland and the Jews there are in grave peril.

V. Blasco Ibanez, the famous Spanish author who is writing a series of articles for the Boston Sunday Advertiser, pictures present-day Paris. The gay capital is worried about its Winter's fuel. Ibanez declares modern Europe is as much concerned about fire as it was centuries ago.

A warning that an American big stick is needed to check Japanese aggression in the Orient is given by a Boston man who served with American troops in Siberia. The military party in Nippon is aligned with the German and Russian autocracy and dislike of America is pronounced, this former lieutenant declares.

Mrs. Alice E. Cram of Jamaica Plain, drafted by the Democratic party as its candidate for state auditor of Massachusetts, has not asked the salary of the office. She is running as a duty to the women of the State and is in the fight to win. She has never lost a contest, she adds.

This interesting woman, who helped her husband build the Boston Public Library and has made $20,000 a year in business for herself, promises real service to the taxpayers if she is elected. She tells of her plans in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

A co-operative wholesale warehouse has been opened in Boston as the latest development in the plan of the workers of New England to "swat the profiteer" by united non-profit action in reducing the cost of living. Tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser will tell how the co-operative idea now includes factories, stores in several lines, bakeries, printing shops and housing projects.

A series of chain shops and a co-operative bank may soon be established. The movement is spreading fast through New England.

GARRETT P. SERVISS' ARTICLE

Speculation as to Inhabitants on Mercury, Venus and Mars, and What They Would Look Like if We Could See Them

By Garrett P. Serviss

"If it were possible to construct a telescope of sufficient power to enable us to view the surface of our near neighbors—Mars, Venus, Mercury—what, in the opinion of astronomers, would be revealed to our gaze? This has been a tremendous thought to me for years, and I will anxiously await your reply.—F. L. O., Chicago."

THE idea underlying your inquiry is, truly, one of the most "tremendous thoughts" that an inhabitant of the earth can entertain. It is akin to the thoughts of a castaway on a lone island who looks across an untraversable expanse of sea and perceiving other islands afar off, bearing many outward resemblances to his own, wonders whether there are upon them intelligent beings exactly like him.

Put It Off

But I am sorry to say, some astronomers, leaders in their science, dismiss, or appear to dismiss, summarily from their minds the thought of the habitability of other planets. They are apt to call any thinking on that subject "sensationalism."

As far as it goes, the positive knowledge that we at present possess concerning the state of things on such planets as Mars, Venus and Mercury is not sufficient to enable us to say, absolutely, that they are or are not inhabited, nor to say approximately (granting their habitability) what would be the appearance, structure and characteristics of their inhabitants.

Judging by terrestrial standards, it would seem that Mercury must be a globe with a very thin atmosphere, without water, subjected to a degree of solar heat several times greater than that poured upon the earth, but variable to an enormous extent, passing from one extreme to the other in a period of only about six weeks. We should also expect, on the same grounds, to find Mercury's surface so burned and scorched that at least no life like any on the earth could exist there. It would, as far as we can judge, be to our eyes a universal desert, one great "Death Valley," on which an ocean of water suddenly poured would burst into one vast cloud of superheated steam. But—the telescope gives very imperfect views of the surface of Mercury, and there may be conditions there utterly unimagined by us.

As for Venus, she seems to have an abundant, and perhaps, a very cloudy atmosphere, with plenty of water, with gravitational conditions very like those of the earth, with an average temperature something like twice that of our planet, and (unless it be true that she rotates on her axis in the same period that she revolves around the sun), a remarkable stability and equality of seasons.

Pure Hypothesis

My guess is that we should see Venus abundantly inhabited, but any attempt to picture the appearance of the inhabitants, or to describe their degree of intelligence, must be based on pure hypothesis.

Mars' so-called polar snows offer the strongest argument for its being in a condition suitable for the maintenance of life forms having an essential nature like those of the earth. Its "canals" are enigmatical markings, which, it cannot be denied, show changes varying with changes of the seasons, that are strongly suggestive of the existence of conditions amidst which life might flourish. The "canals" and the polar "snows" appear to have a close relationship.

DON'T WRAP YOUR TALENT IN A NAPKIN

You have a growing family and at present money values, your salary is small, though it has increased steadily with the years.

Always you have been afraid to deviate from the business course you started in, because you had so little extra money to play on, and so you have stuck to your job and still you cannot seem to make headway.

You have been too timid to take a business chance, is about the size of it, and you feel you must get into some kind of investment to increase your savings faster.

"It takes money to make money"—you have begun to see the truth of this oft-repeated remark.

While it might be unwise for you to put all your savings into something entirely new to your experience, it is time you studied and investigated some of the things which do appeal to you, and with a small investment make a tryout in a comparatively safe way.

You have to take a chance or stay in the employe class, so be the man with the two talents rather than the one who buried his in the ground.
